"CUBAN SANDINO" IN FIELD

Capt. Juan Blas Hernandez, Foe of Machado, Resumes Warfare.

(By the Associated Press.)

HAVANA, Sept. 19.—Confronted by persistent civil war, the new Cuban government today dispatched a train-load of troops and students to Camaguey province, where Capt. Juan Blas Hernandez, known as the "Cuban Sandino," has taken to the field.

Captain Blas conducted a long guerrilla warfare against the deposed president, Gerardo Machado. Recently he spent several weeks in Havana conferring with Gen. Carlos Mendia, one of the principal leaders of the opposition to the present government.

The insurgent captain, who got his nickname because of the similarity of his anti-Machado campaign to that waged for years by Gen. Augusto Sandino in Nicaragua, left for the interior yesterday and immediately took up arms.

May Be Leading 300 Soldiers.

Secretary of Interior Gutierrez confirmed the news that Captain Blas had rebelled, but added that he had no more than 100 men. Dispatches from Moron in Camaguey province said there were 300 well armed soldiers following the captain's leadership.

Reports that rebels were marching toward the capital reached the government today almost simultaneously.
It demands that "President Grau San Martin resign."

There were mutterings in oppositionist camps of revolution as Grau San Martin persisted in his refusal to accede to demands of five powerful political groups that he make way for a "National" government.

"I will quit," he countered, "when anybody who has a right to ask me to resign does so."

He made the statement at the conclusion of a meeting with a committee of Rotarians who, as mediators, have him separate memoranda from the OCCR and ABC political societies, Col. Carlos Mendia's Nationalists, former President Menocal's group, and the Marianistas of Miguel Mariano Gomez.

Students Stand by Grau San Martin
A leader of the student pro-government faction interrupted him to say that "Grau San Martin cannot resign unless we (the student dissenters) who put him in the presidency ask him to."

The executive refused this time to deal directly with the oppositionists, but their demands were presented by the mediators. The five organizations with whom he has repeatedly conferred met without the president and they put their demands, each of which was understood to contain a demand for his resignation and the appointment of a coalition cabinet.
Several oppositionists said his refusal will result in another revolution.

The government, meanwhile, proceeded with its plans. It set May 20, 1934, for a constitutional convention.
Delegates will be elected April

Count on Army Support.

Opposition leaders asserted that at least half of the army would support him in their drive to bring about the downfall of the Grau San Martin regime.

From Moron came news that Captain Blas and his men were on the way to Santa Clara in the direction of Havana. Secretary of Interior Gutierrez predicted they would soon be captured.

"Three squadrons are actively pursuing them," the secretary said, "and do not believe they can reach the city from which they harassed General Machado."

In the Machado regime there were many troop concentrations in the city, but the government soldiers did not capture Captain Blas.

"PRESIDENT GRAU" SUITS HIM

New Cuban Executive Explains His Long Spanish Name.

(By the Associated Press.)

HAVANA, Sept. 19.—President Ramon
Grau San Martin sees no reason American newspaper writers shouldn't abbreviate his lengthy Spanish name.
He's quite willing to have them use simply "Grau." In fact, he signs almost everything "Ramon Grau" as that's quicker and easier than writing his full name.

Here he usually employ both our father's and mother's surnames, the president said today. "My father's name was Grau and my mother's San Martin, so that my full name would be Ramon Grau y San Martin. However, I do not write in the 'Y.'"

(By the Associated Press.)
MADRAS, INDIA, Sept. 19.—Friends today expressed concern over the condition of Mrs. Annie Besant, Theosophical Society leader who long has been in failing health.

Her strength has failed steadily in the last few weeks. She is confined to her bed and has difficulty in taking food.

WOODIN MAY BE EDITOR, TOO.

A News Bureau Says Secretary Will Resign Soon.

(By the Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Following the example of Raymond Moley, former assistant secretary of state who resigned recently to edit a weekly publication, the Gary Miller News Bureau today announced it had learned Secretary Woodin also would resign from politics early next month to become head of a musical publication.

Woodin, the bureau stated, is said to have accepted an offer from Arthur Cremien, director of the New York School of Music and head of the Music Student Creative League of America, to edit a weekly music magazine to start publication soon. The report added Woodin was expected to make official announcement of his resignation on October 6.

SO TOM MIX SAVES TONY.

Zack Miller's Attempt to Seize Show Equipment Fails.

EMPORIA, KAS., Sept. 19.—Tom Mix, movie circus and vaudeville star, says Miller has been able to collect, but human intelligence but Tony didn't understand at all last night when he stood in the alley behind the Granada theater while attorneys for Mix and Col. Zack Miller of the 101 Ranch had a legal battle. Tony, as well as several other horses, Mix's fine sedan, three huge trucks and all of the trunks and stage properties were in charge of Sheriff Joe Dailey while the battle raged.

Colonel Miller has a court judgment for $66,000 against Mix, won on grounds that Mix broke a circus contract with Miller about five years ago.
Miller has been able to collect, so he came to Emporia, where Mix and his company were showing, and obtained an attachment on all of Mix's property. But Mix presented papers to show that all of the property was owned by his wife, Mabel Mix. So Sheriff Dailey released the equipment.

BLOW TO A KIDNAP DEFENSE.

Statements of Six Are Admitted at Trial in Luer Case.

(By the Associated Press.)
EDWARDSVILLE, ILL., Sept. 19.— Statements made by six defendants on trial for the kidnapping of August Luer, wealthy Alton, Ill., banker, who was admitted as testimony so far as they touch individual participation in the abduction, Circuit Judge D. H.
Mudge ruled today.

In the absence of the jury, Percy Michael Fitzgerald, one of the defendants, testified today that he had conferred with a part in the plot.

Testimony of Fitzgerald, known as the "Dice Box Kid," was given in a move by counsel for the defense to prevent introduction of statements of Fitzgerald and Christ Nicola Gitcho.
The latter also is charged with im-passement in the abduction.

The argument over introduction of the statements followed testimony yesterday by Luer and his 75-year-old wife. Mrs. Luer identified Fitzgerald as one of two men who, accompanied by a woman, entered the Luer home last July 10 and seized her husband.

CLEAR IN REICHSTAG FIRE.

International Commission Finds
Two of Five Men Innocent.

(By the Associated Press.)
LONDON, Sept. 19.—An unofficial international commission investigating a fire in the German reichstag building last February was generally believed today to have reached a decision that at least two of the five men accused of starting the fire are innocent.

A secret session was conducted today by the commission, and the findings will be published tomorrow, the day before five men go on trial in Leipzig, with deception recommended as a penalty upon conviction.
The final conclusions, after several days of taking testimony, were drawn up by a subcommittee composed of Arthur Garfield Hays, an American, and British, Swedish and French attorneys, after a secret debate.

It was confidently expected Ernest Torgler, former Communist whip in the reichstag, and Georgi Dimitroff, one of three Bulgarian political refugees, would be deemed innocent.

The others accused of setting the fire before February are Marinus Van Lubbe, an alleged Dutch Communist leader; and Blagoi Popoff and Wassil Taneff, Bulgarians.

DR. STOOKEY TO ST. LOUIS.

Encephalitis Fight Will Be Studied by Epidemiologist.

(By the Associated Press.)
Dr. Paul R. Stookey, city epidemiologist, will leave for St. Louis Friday to observe work there by the United States public health service to combat the sleeping sickness epidemic in that area.

Dr. Stookey is in charge of the isolation ward of the General hospital, in which encephalitis cases are confined.

A PLEASANT WEEK AHEAD

COOL BREEZES AND LOW HUMID-ITY ARE FORECAST.

The Rain, Which Measured .68 of an Inch Here, Also Fell Over Western Missouri and Much of Kansas and Nebraska.

The high pressure area in the northwest that brought last night's "surprise" rain is lining up more pleasant conditions for the midwest, Mr. Hamrick says. The wind started shifting to the northwest before noon today and Mr. Hamrick believes that by night it will have blown out of the air the high humidity that has made the last few days so unbearable.

Furthermore, the temperatures will be down as low as 60 by tomorrow morning, Mr. Hamrick believes, as compared to a minimum of 72 last night. The showers for this section seem to be over for the time being, Mr. Hamrick said. The remainder of the week in the Kansas City vicinity should be generally fair and moderately cool.

The weather bureau had expected the unsettled conditions to arrive here late today, but they were hurried up unexpectedly. A high pressure area in Wyoming brought temperatures this morning as low as 36 degrees in Sheridan, Wyo., and 32 in Yellowstone National Park.

High mercury readings were recorded yesterday in many western states, notably 98 degrees at Bismarck, N. D., and 96 at Fort Smith, Ark., both record high marks for so late in the year.
Many other places reported thermometer readings of 92 to 94 degrees, including the 94 at Kansas City.

Willis, Kas., led off in last night's rainfall, with a total of 2 inches.
Other readings in Kansas of more than one-fourth inch:

Horton 1.10 Peola 47
Lawrence 1.00 Olathe 32
Ottawa80 Garnett 32
Topeka44

Missouri rainfall of more than one-fourth inch:

Kansas City68 Harrisonville 30
Joseph68 Kider 34
Chillicothe60 Lexington 36
In Nebraska the heaviest rainfall reported was .66 inch at Columbus, while Omaha and Fairbury each received .48 inch.

ROOSEVELT OBEYS A DOCTOR.

Cold Is Gone, but Slight Fever Makes Rest Necessary.

(By the Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—President Roosevelt remained away from his desk again today under doctor's orders because of continuation of a slight temperature.

A cold which kept him at home yesterday has cleared up, but with a fraction of a temperature showing.
Lieut. Com. Ross T. McIntire, naval physician, thought it best for the President to avoid strenuous duties.
Engagements were canceled, but Mr.
Roosevelt spent part of the day dictating letters.

HUSBAND SLAYS A RIVAL.

R. A. Keaton, Springfield, Dies in Arms of Killer's Wife.

(By the Associated Press.)
SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 19.—R. A.
Keaton, 35, Springfield meat salesman, was shot fatally this morning on the main street of Branson, and died about two hours later with his head in the arms of the blond woman whose husband had been seen to kill him.

Shelby Thomas, 35, of Branson, was arrested. Joe Glendon, prosecuting attorney, said first degree murder charges probably would be filed against Thomas.

Witnesses said Keaton was crossing the street when Thomas called to him and charged him not only with stealing his wife, but his children, and then fired.

Keaton slumped to the street and told a deputy sheriff.

Go get Sue Thomas. She's in No. 1 cabin, Shady Dell Camp."

Mrs. Thomas, Shelby Thomas's wife, and her children were found at the camp. She rushed to Keaton, who had been taken to a doctor's office.
She held his head in her lap, witnesses said. When Keaton was removed to an ambulance to be taken to Springfield, she got in to accompany him, but he died before the ambulance pulled away from the curb.

HARGUS TO NEW JOB OCT. 1.

Park's Secretary Named Counsel of Public Service Commission.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 19.—Sam O.
Hargus of Kansas City, private secretary to Governor Park, will assume his new duties as chief counsel of the public service commission October 1.

Governor Park today received the resignation of D. D. McDonald of Lebanon, Republican chief counsel, and announced Hargus would succeed him. McDonald, a distant relative of Governor Park, came here in the Hyde administration to take an appointment in the tax commission and remained as counsel for the public service and Civilian Control Administration.

The elevation of Hargus to the $4,500 job likewise will mean a boost for Woodson Cockrill of Platte City, present executive clerk in the governor's office. Cockrill, who is only 21, now will serve as private secretary to the governor.

CHIEF PHELAN A PUZZLE

MACHINE LEADERS STILL GUESS
AT UNEXPECTED RESIGNATION.

Although Close to Pendergast and Indebted for His Job, He Did Not Consult Him—In a Time of Stress.

The sudden resignation yesterday of Robert E. Phelan, chief of police, is just as much a mystery today in Democratic political circles as when Phelan, without warning, handed it to E. C. Reppert, his superior.

Even those highest in the organization's ranks are at a loss to understand why the veteran Phelan did give some warning of his plans. It is generally conceded that there were reasons in the light of recent events why the chief might desire to be relieved.

LOYALTY NOT QUESTIONED.

The most puzzling thing, however, is why Phelan, long a Pendergast adherent and personal friend of the Democratic boss, to whom he in reality owed his position, did not advise with or at least make known his intentions. The loyalty of the police head had at no time been questioned, despite the fact his lot has not been a happy one in recent months.

Moreover, it is inconsistent to figure that any of Phelan's superiors, regardless of how high they stand, would assume the authority of tes-sing the police chief out without consultation and advice first, in the light of his standing with the political boss.

In the speculation today, it cannot be fathomed why Phelan, conscious of the blows directed at the organization in recent weeks, should select this of all times to make his sudden exit, in the midst of a storm.

"JUST WANTED TO QUIT."

At his home, 3205 Washington street, Chief Phelan was asked today to talk today as to why he had tendered his resignation. He reiterated that his action was entirely voluntary.
"No one suggested it," Phelan said.
"I was figuring on quitting September 1, but Mr. Reppert was away at that time."

When asked his reason or if he had tired of police work, Phelan answered:
"No, I like police work, but I just wanted to resign."

The retiring chief said he had no plans for the future.

There are numerous guesses as to Phelan's successor, but they are guesses only, as that subject is being asked for the present. It is virtually foregone that the new chief will come from the ranks, and that youth, coupled with ability, will be important factors in the selection.

T. J. Higgins, chief of detectives, was generally in charge of the department today, signing orders and making assignments. E. C. Reppert, director of police, has instructed James J. O'Neill, secretary in the chief's office, to continue attending to the routine business of the office of chief of police.

TO SHIFT FEDERAL CONVICTS.

Group From Leavenworth Will Man Springfield Hospital.

(By the Star's Own Service.)
LEAVENWORTH, Sept. 19.—About fifty inmates of the federal prison here are to be transferred to Springfield, Mo., within the next few days to take over the duties of an operating personnel for the new hospital there for defective delinquents.

The first group of men will consist of a radio operator, bakers, barbers, cooks, electricians, plumbers, a moving picture operator and other skilled tradesmen. Approximately 150 delinquents in need of hospitalization will be sent there later, pending the arrival of orders from Washington.

Warden F. G. Zerbst will be in Springfield for the dedication ceremony Friday.

GERMANY TO RULE PRICES.

Drastic Power Is Invoked in Regulation Over Grain.

(By the Associated Press.)
BERLIN, Sept. 19.—Walter Darre, minister of food, announced today a revolutionary law giving him supreme power to fix prices for wheat and rye.

The measure rules out private transactions at prices below the fixed level under the most severe penalties, which run up to 100,000 marks ($36,360 at today's rate) and penitentiary terms.

The fixed prices are to represent a minimum, higher prices being permitted. At present the regulations do not extend to oats and barley.
Simultaneously, time bargains in wheat and rye were forbidden on the produce exchanges.

A WIDER FIELD FOR EASTMAN.

Rail Co-ordinator Enters Study of Motor Transportation.

(By the Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The federal co-ordinator of transportation today extended his researches to all forms of public transportation except airplanes in an effort to improve the industry.

Joseph B. Eastman, the co-ordinator, said he had sent to the chairmen of the public service commissions of the forty-eight states and the District of Columbia a questionnaire seeking information as to the problems they have met in handling motor transportation.

$7,000 TO DOG; $10 TO SON.

Kansas, Slain in Holdup, Leaves a Strange Will.

COLUMBUS, Kas., Sept. 19.—W. F.
Kimball, Riverton, Kas., filling station operator who was murdered Sunday night in a holdup, left his estate of approximately $7,000 to his dog, Tuffy, a cross between a German police and a bulldog, according to a will left with the probate judge here today by a Galena, Kas., undertaker.

The will provides that after Kimball's funeral expenses are paid his dog Tuffy shall be provided a home, plenty of good shelter and kind treatment and that he shall be properly buried at his death.

Kimball's son, J. T. Kimball, whose whereabouts is unknown, is left only $10. The will also provides that at the death of Tuffy, the estate remaining shall go to Mrs. Maude Livingston, who runs a filling station at Riverton.

Court officials say they are informed that Kimball left about $7,000, the most of which is in cash. Kimball's will was drawn in Webb City, Mo., September 28, 1932.

TWO STATES VOTE ON REPEAL.

New Mexico and Idaho. Home of Senator Borah, to the Polls.

(By the Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—New Mexico and Idaho were having their say about prohibition today. Clear skies, beckoning the rural vote to the polls, encouraged the dries in Idaho, home state of that long-time friend of prohibition, Senator Borah. Allied dries predicted a vote of more than 100,000, with "well over 50,000" opposing repeal. William Healy, a repeal candidate, estimated a 15,000 repeal majority of a total vote of 75,000.

In New Mexico, foes of prohibition predicted at least a 2 to 1 majority for repeal.

These two states, the only ones to vote on repeal this week, are the thirtieth and thirty-first to ballot on the question.

TO SPEED UP FARM LOANS.

Greater Liberality in Appraisals Urged by Morgenthau.

(By the Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Governor
Henry Morgenthau, of the farm credit administration, today called for greater liberality in appraising farm lands, in a message to officers and employees of the twelve federal land banks starting a movement to speed farm mortgage refinancing.

Handling of loans must be accelerated immediately, he said, to keep pace with applications from farmers arriving at the rate of 17-20,000 a week.

Counting 150 million dollars made available by the Reconstruction Corporation, Morgenthau's administration will have 400 million dollars for loans on farms in the next six months. He believes this will be adequate, although there are now approximately 800 million dollars in applications for loans pending.

PLAN HONEYMOON IN MEXICO.

Jean Harlow and Rosson Later
May Go to Honolulu.

(By the Associated Press.)
HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 19.—A six weeks' honeymoon in the City of Mexico was in prospect today for Jean Harlow, 22-year-old platinum blond film star, and Harold G. Rosson, 38, Hollywood cameraman.

Married early yesterday morning in Yuma, Ariz., after a thrilling midnight airplane elopement from Hollywood, they returned here and were in seclusion today in Miss Harlow's Georgian mansion.

Miss Harlow said she hoped to accompany Rosson next week to the City of Mexico, where he was super-

"I'm not in that picture, but I'll move heaven and earth to accompany Hal to the City of Mexico," Miss Harlow said. "Later, we'll honeymoon in Honolulu."

for Bates, alleged to be one of the two machine gunmen who seized Urschel from a bridge game on the porch of his big brick home here the night of July 22, rose to his feet with an objection.

"That's argumentative," Judge Edgar S. Vaughn told Hyde. "Confine yourself to what you intend to prove."

Hyde then began a dramatic story of "purple riders in the night, bearing machine guns as arms," to hold "one of Oklahoma's finest citizens."

As court opened no seats were empty, and the spectators chiefly were gathered from the upper level of Oklahoma society, attending to learn at first hand the true story of how the home of one of their members was invaded and its head taken from his family by force.

Reads the Indictment.
A dozen defendants sat stolidly as Hyde began by reading the lengthy indictment charging conspiracy.

Bailey, called the "brains" of the kidnap gang, sat quietly beside his attorney, as did Bates, the alleged "strong-arm" man of the ring.

R. G. Shannon and their son, Armon, shifted slightly in their seats as Hyde got under way with his scathing denunciation of the crime.

Occasionally as Hyde spoke harshly of the kidnapers Mrs. Urschel, dressed modestly in dark blue near the rail dividing the courtroom, nodded vigorously.

"The evidence will show that Bates and his companion went into the home of Mr. Urschel under cover of darkness," Hyde asserted, "that they kidnaped Mr. Urschel and sped into the night, out of Oklahoma County and into Pottawatomie County, to the home of a relative of George Kelly."

Kelly Still Is Sought.
Kelly and his wife still are hunted as fugitives in the case. Mrs. Kelly is the daughter of Mrs. Shannon by a previous marriage.

"The proof will show that these two men were in Oklahoma City several days prior to the kidnaping and that they came here as the result of an understanding," Hyde continued.

"The proof will show that the defendant Kelly was about July 15 or 16 in Dallas, Tex.; that he sent a telegram to his friend Bates, who was in Denver, saying 'When and where will I meet you in Oklahoma City?'"

"It will show that Bates telegraphed back to Kelly under the name of R. G. Shannon, and that he said, 'I'll meet you July 19 at the Billmore hotel,' which was just three days before the kidnaping."

"The proof will show that they met in Oklahoma City, and that Bates at that time had the car they had used to kidnap Urschel. It was a Chevrolet 1933 with an Indiana tag."

Says Bates Owned Car.
"We will show that Bates owned that car in Denver. We'll show that by the apartment house owners in Denver where he stayed under the name of Davis and some other name I can't remember. I think Filton; that he had a Buick car, and that they changed to this car after hauling Urschel away."

"We'll show by three persons—first, the testimony of two young boys that were visiting their grandparents on a farm near Stratford—that George and Kathryn Kelly (George's wife) and Bates were near there for several days prior to the kidnaping. We will show that they made frequent trips to Oklahoma City at night, but always when these boys would get up in the morning they would be there, back at Stratford."

"We will show that they made trips Friday and Saturday nights in the same manner, transferring machine guns in black cases from one car to another. We will bring two boys before you who will tell you that at noon, July 22, down near Stratford, George Kelly said to one of the boys, 'There's going to be a kidnaping in Oklahoma City.'"

"In the Big Money."
"We will show further that Kathryn Kelly said also, 'We're going to be in the big money before long.'"

"Yes, and we're going to show that George Kelly was there and that Bates was there. We'll put the grandmother, a woman nearing 75, on the stand and the grandfather of Kathryn Kelly, and they'll tell you that Kelly was there and that Bates was there and that Kathryn was there."

"They'll tell you that these men came to their house under cover of darkness the morning of July 23 and that they gassed their car, changed cars, and drove away. They'll tell you that Kathryn Kelly drove to Fort Worth."

"Now the scene shifts to Oklahoma City, Charles Urschel and his wife were in their own home where they had a right to be, playing an innocent game. They were entertaining guests."

"We Want Urschel."
"At 11:15 o'clock at night, there came unwanted, unannounced and without calling cards, two men. Urschel will identify the men. One of them said:

"We want Urschel. They leveled their machine guns on him. They marched him out of the house and started for Stratford. They drove out toward Sixty-third street and there let Jarrett (Walter Jarrett, kidnaped with Urschel) out of the car. They then drove on toward Harrah where Urschel recognized his whereabouts for the last time in nine days."

"There, near Harrah, they blindfolded him. They told him, 'We don't want to hurt you. When a car passes, you lie down in the back end of the car. If a car comes, we will be compelled to shoot.' In the back seat of the car, he lay down blindfolded, chained and handcuffed."

"They kept him in that cramped position until 2:30 p. m. the afternoon of Sunday. When they finally drove their car into a garage, Urschel asked them what time of day it was and how far they had gone."

"The Questions Answered."
"They told him they had traveled 350 miles in a straight line and that it was 2:30 o'clock."

"The garage had a tin roof. It rained that day. Mr. Urschel noted about what time he thought it was; he noted about what time he thought it was when it quit raining. He had no watch; it would have done him no good if he had. He could not have seen it."

"They kept him in the garage until after midnight. They then took him into the home of R. G. Shannon."

Hyde bore down on the name Shannon, with special emphasis.

A large crowd of breathless as Hyde related the details of a master crime. The doors in the back of the courtroom were opened but uniformed policemen were there.

Hyde held evidence he said would show that Urschel, upon his arrival at the Shannon farm near Paradise, Tex., was queried about a possible intermediary.

The victim, Hyde said, was asked if he had a pastor who might arrange negotiations. Told that Dr. S. M. Gibson of Oklahoma City was the oil man's pastor, but was out of town, the matter was dropped for a time.

Hyde said the evidence showed. Several hours after Urschel's arrival at the hiding place, Hyde said, proof will show that the oil man was given a cup of hot coffee made by Mrs. Shannon; that he was fed sparingly for the first few days and his abductors read reports of his kidnapping to him from newspaper headlines.

The prosecutor said the government would present a written statement by Armon Shannon telling how the kidnapers offered him $10,000 to watch over Urschel at his home after the victim had been removed from the home of R. G. Shannon on the same farm.

The defense waived its four opening statements until the government rests and moved that all witnesses be excluded from the courtroom during progress of the case.

Without Food for a Day.
Hyde declared in his opening statement Urschel was given nothing to eat from Saturday night until Sunday night.

"These kidnapers," Hyde said with a sneer, "were kind enough to give him a sandwich and a cup of coffee, prepared by that very Mrs. Shannon."

"They kept him handcuffed that night. The next morning, another meal was prepared by Mrs. R. G. Shannon," and again the youthful prosecutor bore down on the name of the only woman defendant's name.

"July 24, the two kidnapers, mind you, marched this man into the very presence of R. G. Shannon. They hauled him out of his home and took him down to Armon's house."

"They discussed with Armon whether he would like to make some big money; $10,000, they said. The written statement of this boy himself will give you that."

"They made Mr. Urschel lie down, sleep on a dirty, filthy, cold floor. They were not courteous enough to let him sleep in the bed."

Says Shannon Stood Guard.
"We will show that Armon Shannon was armed and holding guard over Urschel while these other fellows, Kelly and Bates and the others, were getting the money, so they would come back to the farm and give him his share of the ransom."

"We will show that Tuesday Bates and Kelly visited Urschel and stood behind him and removed his blindfold and told him to write a letter to his family."

"He wrote a letter to his wife and then another to John G. Catlett, his friend in Tulsa, telling them that the Slick estate was in a bad way financially, but that his life was at stake. He wrote 'if the ransom they ask is too high, just forget about me.' And he turned that letter over to the kidnapers."

"They said, 'Hell, you can't send a letter like that. We don't give a damn about the condition of your oil company. We want the money!'"

"And they made him write another letter, which they dictated to him in which he said he would be killed unless the ransom was paid."

Kelly Got "Chummy."
"The proof will disclose, to go back a little bit, that while Urschel was held prisoner down on that farm, Kelly was present until Friday, the day of the second note, and that Kelly warmed up and got kind of chummy. We'll show that Kelly said:

"This place is as safe as it can be. We used it in the old days as a hangout when we were running liquor from Mexico to Chicago. All the boys use it. After they pull a bank job or something they come down here to 'cool off.'"

"We'll show that he said Harvey Bailey, Bob Brady and Jim Clark had been at the farm—that he told all about the Kansas City massacre. We'll show that Bates said they always gave Shannon $200 to $300 to use the place as a hangout."

"Now let us proceed to the date the Shannons and Harvey Bailey were captured."

"The federal officers, Gus Jones and Frank J. Blake, and R. H. Colvin, and the others who worked with them, had been busy on the case from almost the moment Urschel was kidnaped."

Found Place of Hiding.
"And from the minute Urschel returned, their work was concentrated on finding the place he had been held and the search finally converged upon the ranch of R. G. Shannon, about five miles from Paradise, Tex."

"Shannon walked out and was met with an order to hold up his hands. In a building, the same building where Urschel was kept, we found Harvey Bailey sleeping; and at the same time we find a machine gun that Kathryn Kelly had bought in a pawn shop in Fort Worth for $250. And we find it was the same gun that was used in the kidnaping of Mr. Urschel. We find it, gentlemen, on the Shannon farm."

"We will show that the officers found $700 on Bailey's person, ransom money paid by the Urschel family."

To Reformatory for Robbery.
Charles Packard, 20 years old, St. Louis, Mo., pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary and larceny today and was sentenced to the state reformatory at Hutchinson, Kas., by Judge Charles A. Miller of Wyandotte County district court. He admitted the robbery Wednesday of the apartment of V. D. Smith, 755 Minnesota avenue, Kansas City, Kansas.

Judge A. Stanford Lyon, Who Died Unexpectedly Today.

The Jackson County emergency relief committee met today at the Hotel Kansas City with four members of the state legislature as guests. The purpose of the meeting was to acquire the legislators with the relief problem faced by Kansas City.

C. Whit Pfeiffer, secretary of the committee, pictured the situation here as very bad. Under the new regulations the government would give only half of the amount raised by the city or state. He said that unless additional funds were obtained the committee would be unable to feed people. The direct relief bill for the state next year will be about 12 million dollars, Mr. Pfeiffer said, and the city's direct bill will be $1,700,000, in addition to institutions.

J. E. Woodmansee said that Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, had told him Missouri would be taken care of until November 1.

A CLARK VISIT "PLEASANT."
Pendergast Says Only Generalities Were Discussed.

There was no patronage discussed or agreements made between T. J. Pendergast and Senator Bennett C. Clark, who conferred Saturday in Clayton, near St. Louis.

The trip to Clayton by Pendergast, who was accompanied by Joseph B. Shannon, was largely through a misunderstanding. Senator Clark had indicated he desired to see the Kansas City boss. Because of illness in Senator Clark's family, together with the fact it was an ideal day to motor, Pendergast, Shannon and Thomas J. Pendergast, Jr., drove to Clayton.

After brief preliminaries, in which it was discovered that there was nothing commanding immediate attention, the senator, Pendergast and Shannon had a pleasant visit and talked only generalities.

Today Pendergast, who opposed Senator Clark in the primaries a year ago, observed that the "outing and meeting was a very pleasant one," and expressed high regard for Senator Clark.

MANSFIELD TRIAL IS ON.
Four Brothers and Another Accused in Bond Fraud.

Trial on United States fraud indictments of five officers of the Universal Bond and Mortgage Company, 902 Walnut street, began before Judge Albert L. Reeves today after many delays sought by the defense since last April.

The defendants are the four Mansfield brothers, formerly of Ottawa, Kas., and Julius Waldstein of Leavenworth, Kas. The brothers are Guy M. Mansfield, Frank Mansfield, Wilbur Mansfield and Allen Mansfield.

The indictments charge use of the mails in a scheme to defraud investors in stocks and bonds sold by the company.

A jury was selected this morning and testimony was to begin late today. The trial probably will last more than a week. Samuel M. Carmean, an assistant United States district attorney, is chief prosecutor, and the defendants have as counsel Ira B. Burns, J. M. Johnson, Paul White, Harry Donnelly, William D. Dickinson and Ben Endres, the latter of Leavenworth.

In questioning prospective jurors Dickinson sought an answer to this question:

"Have you ever lost money in a depression?"

Judge Reeves ruled the question was improper and irrelevant and pointed out that a jury might never be obtained if it was to be composed of men who could reply "no" to the question.

B. R. Allen, special agent for the division of investigation, compiled the government's case against the Mansfield brothers and Waldstein, and will be a principal witness.

It was estimated the government might call sixty witnesses and the defense at least thirty.

LOVELIGHT IN JEAN HARLOW'S EYES FOR HER NEW HUSBAND.

Jean Harlow, movie queen, ran away from home to be married early yesterday morning, just as she had done six years ago when she was 16 years old. The picture shows Miss Harlow and her new husband, Paul Bern, 38-year-old motion picture photographer, as they appeared one of the few times they were seen at Hollywood social functions. "I don't even care if he beats me at golf," Jean says in proof of her love for Rosson, who is credited with much of the success of Jean's recent screen roles, because he developed new camera technique that eliminated the objectionable features that the powerful movie lights gave to her face, and so made her the type of actress the theater-going public could enjoy watching. After their wedding at 4:30 o'clock in the morning at Yuma, Ariz., Mr. and Mrs. Rosson flew back to Hollywood and returned to their jobs.

A KEY SESSION OF YOUTH
MASS MEETING TONIGHT TO BE HIGH POINT IN CAMPAIGN.

The Movement, With Fight on Partisan Government as Its Objective, Is Growing, Leaders Say.

A high pitch has been reached in the campaign for membership by the National Youth Movement, the group of young men and women organized early this year to wage a war on political party domination of Kansas City's affairs.

The mass meeting of the organization at 8 o'clock tonight at the Hotel Kansas City is expected to be a key session in the campaign for members, which became intensive three weeks ago when the organization announced it would put a nonpartisan ticket in the field for the city election next March.

THE MEMBERSHIP GROWING.
In the last three weeks, according to Joseph C. Fennelly, Youth Movement president, the number of members has doubled twice. Within the next two weeks, Mr. Fennelly said, a list of older men and women who will sponsor the nonpartisan ticket and approve the candidates for city office will be announced. One of the principal talks at the meeting tonight will be made by Leland Hazard, lawyer, who was to discuss "The Need for a Nonpartisan City Government."

Preceding the talk by Mr. Hazard, the members and prospective Youth Movement members will hear a discussion of "Crime and General Conditions Tolerated by the City Government" by Lyman Field, young orator who twice won the city championship in The Star's contest.

A Youth Movement member, Field is being called here from Lawrence, where he is a student at the University of Kansas. Young Field is a son of Russell Field, former Republican police commissioner, who will attend the mass meeting.

JUDGE PAGE TO ATTEND.
Among those who also have accepted special invitations to attend are Judge James R. Page of the circuit court; Judge Carlin P. Smith, a speaker earlier this month; William E. Byers, whose resignation as chairman of the Republican county committee was accepted last night; W. L. Vandewater, United States district attorney; Dr. A. Ross Hill and Charles Blackmar.

Webster W. Townley will speak on the membership campaign and discuss the purposes of the movement. Each member has pledged to enroll in the present campaign and the members were asked to bring as many prospects as possible to tonight's meeting.

HAS A DRAMSHOP PLAN

BEVERAGE DISPENSERS' HEAD TO OFFER IT TO STATE COMMISSION.

Proposed Prohibition of Buying a Drink, but Permitting Sale of a Quantity Is Conducive to Intoxication, He Says.

A license issued to an applicant for a liquor dispensary only after permission has been obtained from 51 per cent of the property owners in the block in which it is proposed to locate the establishment, is a part of a liquor control plan drawn up by C. B. Nelson, president of the Beverage Dispensers' Union. The plan will be submitted tomorrow at St. Louis to Governor Park's liquor control commission.

Mr. Nelson, prominently identified in Kansas City with labor activities, does not agree with proposals voiced by others, that purchasers should be allowed to buy only a certain amount of liquor each day.

SEES NO TEMPERANCE THUS.
"For," he says, "where one is not allowed to get a drink, but must purchase a certain amount of liquor, the purchaser, with the liquor in his possession, frequently would be tempted to drink the entire amount at once, thus becoming intoxicated and militating against temperance."

The idea of the head of the beverage dispensers' organization would be to permit the establishment of what he terms dramshops, but with a law which would forbid the proprietors serving liquor to minors or to intoxicated persons.

"The people who would make a success of the handling of liquor," the Nelson plan sets forth, "are the ones who realize the promotion of drunkenness does not make a success of their business or keep them in business. It never did and never will. The liquor business is the only business wherein persons must not try to see how much they can sell to one person. Another thing, they must not try to push the sale to one whom the proprietor knows has had enough or who cannot afford to buy more."

After an application for a license had received the necessary consent of 51 per cent of the property owners, the application then would be submitted for final action to whatever body may be established for liquor control in the state.

NO SALE NEAR SCHOOLS.
In no case, according to Mr. Nelson's plan, would a license be granted for a liquor dispensing establishment in any block in which a church or school was located.

"Where a persons can enter a reputable place," the union head said today, "and take a drink or two and leave at will, and where the management does not allow persons to become intoxicated, is far ahead of the prohibition idea where one is not allowed to get a drink, but must buy a given amount."

To call the place a hotel or by any other name than a dramshop, and then allow the place to operate other than under these regulations, would do what prohibition did to create intolerance and contempt for the law."

Asked how he would differentiate between his plan for the establishment of "dramshops" and the old-fashioned saloon, he replied:

"The difference would lie in the difference in legal regulations for the dispensing of liquors. The old saloon went along, almost without regulation. My idea is to create licensed establishments that would operate under strict regulations for the prevention of the objectionable features of the old saloons."

Widow of Charles Kittle and Ex-Mate of Fontaine Fox Complains.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Jean D. Mitchell, widow of the late Charles M. Kittle who was president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and the former wife of Fontaine Fox, cartoonist, filed suit for divorce today from Leon W. Mitchell of Rock Island. Her third wedding occurred May 1, 1930, at Joliet.

Mrs. Mitchell alleged in her bill that she left him after becoming convinced this summer of his infidelity. She named "Mary Smith" as correspondent.

Once a society hostess at the Blackstone hotel here and later at the Imperial hotel in Tokio, Mrs. Mitchell met her third husband in the Orient.

RICH PRIZE IN LOTTERY

GOVERNMENT TRACES $155,300 TO SENATOR JAMES J. DAVIS.

Defense Loses a Point When Prosecution Introduces Charts Showing Division of 3 Million in Charity Funds.

New York, Sept. 19.—Introduction of large charts to illustrate the destination of charity money taken in by the Loyal Order of Moose in 1930 and 1931 brought vociferous objections today from the attorneys defending Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania against federal lottery charges.

Judge Johnson Hayes ruled the charts proper and Louis Mead Treadwell, youthful prosecutor, was permitted to hold them aloft before the jury while he continued his opening statement, accusing Davis and his co-defendant, Theodore G. Miller, of causing lottery tickets to be sent across state lines.

A LARGE PROFIT IS SHOWN.
The first chart was headed "Disbursement of 1930 receipts, Loyal Order of Moose lottery." It was designed to show Davis and Miller received $150,000 from the total profits of $450,000. A like amount went to Mooseheart, the Moose children's home at Mooseheart, Ill., and the remainder to B. C. McGuire, a professional promoter who has pleaded guilty.

The second chart, similarly headed for 1931, listed profits of $300,000, of which $100,000 was listed as going to Davis and Miller, $100,000 to Mooseheart and $100,000 to McGuire.

"There is no charge of crime in the receipt of profits," Treadwell said, "but they show that Davis knew what was going on, knew that lotteries were being conducted."

A THIRD CHART IS BARRED.
Treadwell was not allowed to display a third chart, which detailed gross receipts of $3,224,493.44 from the two alleged lotteries, net profits of $1,000,000, of which $1,000,000 went to Davis and Miller, $1,000,000 to Mooseheart and $1,000,000 to McGuire.

The total profit for Davis, according to the government contention, amounted to $155,300. Only $15,300 was listed as going to Davis's personal account, but the government contends $140,000 paid to the Moose organization department was paid, in fact, to Davis, since he was alleged to be sole owner of the department.

The total paid to Miller, Treadwell asserted, was $76,849.71.

STAND OF THE DEFENSE.
Charles H. Tuttle opened for the defense. "Every time Treadwell speaks of this thing," he told the jury, "he is going to call it 'lottery.' That is his privilege. We deny it was a lottery."

"In the first place," he continued, "we claim that Senator Davis knew nothing about the Moose charity balls and that he never consciously got a cent out of it."

Tuttle argued to the jury that the charity ball tickets were not, in fact, lottery tickets at the time they went across the state lines. He also took issue with the government on the amount of money that went to Mooseheart. He said that of every $4 taken from the project by local Moose lodges, $2 went to Mooseheart, $1 to a lodge charity fund, 50 cents to support the Moose magazine and 50 cents to the supreme lodge. All told, he asserted, 1 million dollars went to Mooseheart.

SENATOR'S RECORD IS TOLD.
Tuttle then jumped into a dramatic recital of Davis's career.

"He began as a bootblack," he said, "and then a telegraph boy—and one of his duties as a telegraph boy in a mining town forty years ago was to deliver telegrams informing miners' wives that they were widows after mine accidents, and that now their children would be scattered, and be the objects of charity among the neighbors."

"He made up his mind then and there that as soon as he could he would do something about it." He then carried the senator's career up to the creation of Mooseheart.

It will house a motor car equipped with doubly reinforced bullet proof steel, an eighth of an inch thick, and bullet proof glass throughout, designed for use in pursuing escaped prisoners.

SILVER PLAN TO ROOSEVELT
Pittman Proposes Free Coinage as a Means of Inflation.

(By the Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Senator Pittman of Nevada, Democrat, went before President Roosevelt with his proposal for free coinage of silver as a means of inflation.

The senator, who was the silver delegate on the American delegation to the recent London economic conference, was called to the White House by the President, who interrupted his rest from a cold to talk business at luncheon.

Pittman has filed a brief with Mr. Roosevelt contending the President has the legal right to allow the unrestricted coinage of silver produced hereafter in this country.

He contends if silver producers are allowed to have the bullion coined and used by them it will raise the price of silver from 41 cents an ounce to $1.20.

He estimates that from 29 million to 33 million would be put into circulation by this step.

STEEL PLACE GOES VACANT.
Successor to Robert P. Lamont May Not Be Named.

New York, Sept. 19.—Financial circles heard today that no successor was likely to be named for Robert P. Lamont as president of the American Iron and Steel Institute. Lamont, former secretary of commerce, resigned last week. Reports in the financial district said a governing board would probably be chosen to direct activities of the institute under the NRA code through an executive secretary.

'CITY HALL UNION' MOVE
LABOR ORGANIZERS IN CONTACT WITH MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES.

Proposals Have Been Made Outside the City Hall—Smith and McElroy Not Averse, but Later Doubts Practicability.

It was learned today that labor organizers have been approaching city employees with a view to forming them into a union. It is known they have approached employees outside the city hall, but none inside. Executives, such as secretaries to directors, the directors, and superintendents, would be eligible. It would take in a vast majority of the more than 3,000 city employees, however.

Some of the employees at the city hall, who had heard of the move, but who had not been approached, were discussing the matter today, without approving or disapproving the plan. One expressed this sentiment:

"It might be all right. Who knows what's what these days? With the 20 per cent cut at the beginning of this fiscal year, and the additional 25 per cent lug put on us for the last eight months of this year, I don't know what we would use for dues if we did join."

Mayor Smith and H. F. McElroy, city manager, had heard nothing of the alleged labor move, but both said that if city employees desired to organize for the purpose of "collective bargaining" as provided for in the NRA, there would be no opposition to it.

"However," added the city manager, "a city is not like a manufacturing plant. It derives its money from only one source, taxes. The city charter makes it a felony for us to pay out more than we take in. That does not apply to industry. And when we are compelled to live within the law, that is just what we are going to have to do."

CONFERENCE ON FEE SHORTAGES.
Former Register of Deeds and Wyandotte Prosecutor Meet.

James Stewart, former register of deeds of Wyandotte County, whose records are being audited by a certified public accountant under orders of the county commissioners, was in conference an hour today with Fred R. White, Wyandotte County attorney.

Emerging from the county attorney's office, Stewart had no statement to make relative to the conference other than to say "my conscience is clear and I have nothing to fear."

Mr. White likewise made no comment on the conference.

Since Stewart vacated the office last January various discrepancies have been found in the records made in his terms of office in the collection of fees for the filing of instruments.

Kaw Drainage District Residents to Fight for Levy.

Determined to obtain flood protection equal to that on the opposite side of the Kaw River, property owners in the Argentine and Turner sections of the Kaw Valley drainage district of Wyandotte County will file a motion for a writ of mandamus in the supreme court of Kansas at Topeka to compel Howard Thorn, county clerk, to certify a levy of 25 cents on each $100 in the valuation for the general fund for the district.

The suit was to be filed today by A. J. Herrod, lawyer, in the name of Frank Hawkins, 1314 South Thirty-fourth street, Kansas City, Kansas, who is representing a group of property owners.

Mr. Thorn has refused to recognize the 25 cent general fund levy. He contends that inasmuch as the board already has $60,000 carried over in its general fund this year an additional levy would not be legal.

COTTON PROTEST GOES IN.
But the President Still Is Unable to See Delegation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—A copy of the demands of the cotton conference for inflation of the currency to increase farm commodity prices, and to guarantee 20 cents a pound price for cotton, was left at the White House today after the members were informed President Roosevelt was unable to receive them.

The indisposition which kept Mr. Roosevelt confined to the executive mansion yesterday still required him to be careful today. He has a slight cold, it was said.

The resolutions, left with Stephen Early, a secretary to the President, were presented by Senator Smith of South Carolina, chairman of the conference; Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, chairman of the resolutions committee; and Neville Bennett of Bennettsville, S. C., secretary.

Thomas said Early told them President Roosevelt regretted very much he was unable to receive the delegates, numbering approximately 200 from nine southern states.

Early notified Secretary Wallace the group was leaving the White House immediately to wait on him and to present their demands for inflation, and for suspension until January 15 of the cotton processing tax of 42 cents a pound levied under the agricultural adjustment act.

Senator Wheeler Travels Again.
GLASGOW, MONT., Sept. 19.—(A. P.)—Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana and his family, who were inured last Saturday when their car overturned, left today for Williston, N. D., and from there will continue by motor car to Washington, D. C.

A SUIT FOR MALPRACTICE
DR. E. L. DAVIS ACCUSED BY SISTER OF PATIENT WHO DIED.

Damage Action Pending Since 1931 May Be Delayed Further by Fatal Shooting of Paul Proctor.

The outcome of the case of Dr. E. L. Davis, expected to be indicted tomorrow for first degree murder by the county grand jury in connection with the fatal shooting by the doctor Thursday of Paul Proctor at Dr. Davis's office at 1125 Grand avenue, was expected today to delay a suit brought by Mrs. Ethel Hackathorn, 3942 Troost avenue, seeking $10,000 damages from Dr. Davis for alleged malpractice. In that suit it is charged by Mrs. Hackathorn that Jacob F. Bickford, a brother of Mrs. Hackathorn, was electrocuted during a treatment by the accused doctor.

The damage suit has been pending since 1931, when it was filed by Mrs. Hackathorn as administratrix of her brother's estate. James R. Sullivan, an assistant city counselor, attorney for Mrs. Hackathorn, said today the suit probably would not come to trial for several weeks.

The petition states that Bickford, 29 years old, died August 30, 1931, during an electrical treatment in Dr. Davis's office when the doctor "carelessly, negligently and unskillfully applied to his body electricity and electrical current and kept the same so applied to his body for such a length of time that as a direct result Bickford died."

Bickford, who was unmarried, went to Dr. Davis's office one Sunday morning after Sunday school for a treatment for neuritis, his sister said. The next she heard of him was a telephone call from an undertaker who had been directed by the coroner to take charge of the body. The undertaker, Mrs. Hackathorn said, told her she ought to have a physician examine her brother's body because it was burnt from electrocution.

Besides Mrs. Hackathorn, Bickford left another sister, Mrs. Mary A. Parks; a brother, L. O. Bickford, and his father, John W. Bickford.

STATE ELKS' MEET HERE

JULY 15, FIRST DAY OF NATIONAL CONVENTION, IS 1934 DATE.

Dr. M. E. Gouge of Sedalia Is Elected President of the Missouri Association in Closing Session at Warrensburg.

(By the Star's Own Service.)
WARRENSBURG, Mo., Sept. 19.—Kansas City was selected for the 1934 Missouri state Elks convention at the closing business session this morning of the meeting being held here. The convention will be held July 15, the first day of the national convention, which also is to be held in Kansas City.

The selection was made after an invitation had been extended by Dwight Roberts, exalted ruler of Kansas City lodge No. 28.

Officers elected for the coming year include: Dr. M. E. Gouge, Sedalia, president; Dr. Don H. Silsby, Springfield, first vice-president; B. L. Ellis, Trenton, second vice-president; M. F. Thurston, Columbia, third vice-president; Lew Gallant, St. Louis, secretary; L. L. Lobban, Warrensburg, treasurer; Bernard P. Dickmann, St. Louis, R. L. Covington, Clinton, and J. H. Carson, Maryville, trustees.

A program which will promote the correction and treatment of poor eyesight among the children of Missouri was adopted and E. J. Martt of St. Louis was named chairman of the committee, with instructions to begin immediately.

BRIDE FOR IRAQ'S YOUNG KING.

Ghazi Will Wed His Cousin, the Princess Aliyah.

(By the Associated Press.)

BAGDAD, Iraq, Sept. 19.—Young King Ghazi, who succeeded his father, the late King Faisal, only eleven days ago, is engaged to marry his cousin, the Princess Aliyah, daughter of former King Ali of the Hedjaz. Political reasons, it was said, may have been responsible for the engagement so soon after the death of King Faisal. The future queen of Iraq is 22 years old, the same age as the king. Reports from the palace are that she is very beautiful. Few have seen her face, however, as she has lived all her life behind a veil. The marriage is not expected before six months.

NIGHT SCHOOL MONDAY

SEVERAL NEW COURSES ALREADY ARE ASSURED.

Any Subject Desired by Fifteen or More Persons Will Be Taught—Board to Assign Teachers Tomorrow Night.

Courses in meteorology, dramatic expression and public speaking will be among the new features of the night school curriculum when classes open Monday. Assignment of teachers to night classes will be made at the board meeting tomorrow night. An effort has been made to hire only teachers unemployed at present.

A preliminary enrollment will be held Thursday and Friday night at Junior college. Classes will be organized in any subject in which fifteen or more persons desire to enroll. Classes at Junior college in high school and college subjects will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, from 7 to 9 o'clock.

Classes at Lathrop Polytechnic Institute will open Monday night without preliminary enrollment.

The Americanization center which until last year was held in the Hamilton school will be conducted at Junior college, offering instruction in English, civics and American history.

In the college classes a charge of $2.50 a semester is made for each hour of college credit, with a limit of three credit hours. The same fees will be charged at Lathrop, with the exception of some courses where additional laboratory charges are required. The charge for high school classes is $6 for the year, with a limit of three credit courses.

The classes at Lathrop will be held only twice a week, on Monday and Thursday nights. Only tradesmen actively engaged in the practice of their craft or temporarily out of work will be admitted.

A meeting of all principals of elementary schools will be held at 9:30 o'clock Saturday in the assembly room of the public library. The next teachers' institute will be held Saturday, September 30. Dr. Lorado Taft, famous sculptor, will speak on "Beauty in American Life."

ONE OF THE SINGER HEIRS DIES.

Edward S. Clark, a Crippled Bachelor, Gave Away Millions.

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 19.—Edward Severin Clark, 63, one of the four Clark brothers who inherited the fortune derived from the Singer Sewing Machine Company, died today.

He was the eldest of the four brothers. The others are F. Ambrose, the horseman, and Stephen C., of New York, and Robert Sterling of Middleburg, Va. The eldest brother, who was crippled from childhood, never married. He gave millions to charity and education in his home town and his native state.

The grandfather of the four Clarks, also named Edward, was a lawyer in New York City when he met Isaac M. Singer, who needed money to finance his crudely built sewing machine. A partnership developed in 1880 and when Singer died Clark became the owner of the Singer industry.

Alfred Corning Clark inherited the business and with the death of himself and his wife, the four sons became the owners.

PREACHER LOSES SUSPENSERS AND BIBLE IN JONESBORO CLASH.

Feminine Supporters of the Rev. Joe Jeffers Seize the Rev. Doc Applegate, Spokesman for Rival Faction.

(By the Associated Press.)

JONESBORO, Ark., Sept. 19.—A new minister's attempt to occupy the pulpit of the Jonesboro Baptist tabernacle, scene of bitter intra-congregation strife for weeks, ended last night in his flight from an attacking group of women, minus his suspenders and Bible.

The Rev. Doc Applegate, a former deputy constable and ordained minister, mounted the platform at tabernacle services and announced he had been sent to preach in place of the Rev. Dale S. Crowley, one of the rivals for the pastorate.

Immediately, according to reports to officers today, fifteen or twenty women members of the Rev. Joe Jeffers faction, in possession of the tabernacle, advanced upon him. They seized Applegate, tore off his suspenders and part of his shirt and threw him off the platform, officers reported. He fled from the tabernacle, leaving his suspenders and Bible behind.

Whether warrants would be issued in connection with the new flare-up in the church war was not announced. Crowley, recognized by a chancery

CHASE & SANBORN'S DATED COFFEE

Going on all this month

A full 30 days at Sale Prices!

FOUR years ago Chase & Sanborn gave American housewives Dated Coffee—and freedom from stale coffee that contains rancid oil and often causes headaches, indigestion, "nerves."

They printed the date of delivery to the grocer on every pound. And they never allow a can to stay on his shelf more than 10 days.

Today Dated Coffee is the fastest growing coffee in the country.

And now, on Dated Coffee's fourth anniversary, Chase & Sanborn want everyone to share in their success. For this reason, all this month they are making it possible for your grocer to sell you Dated Coffee at a reduced price.

It's the same fresh, delicious Dated Coffee you have been buying right along—rushed to your grocer at the peak of its flavor, by the same swift delivery system that brings him Fleischmann's fresh Yeast regularly. But prices are down!—All through September!

Don't miss a single chance to take advantage of this big coffee bargain. Anniversary sale prices are in effect at your grocer's now—and every day this month!

RATE HEARING VARIATION

SESSION HERE DIFFERS FROM THE USUAL STATISTICAL FORM.

Three Hundred Coal Dealers Are Trying to Prove Shipments on Which They Are Entitled to $4 Million Refund.

The interminable drone and monotony of interstate commerce commission hearings, in which opposing counsel argue year after year on rates and statistics, finds an interesting variation at a hearing now transpiring around a littered table at the Hotel Kansas City. Real money is involved in this one, with some 300 coal dealers in Kansas and Nebraska attempting to recover about $4 million dollars.

There is the same eternal conflict—the railroads against the shippers. Counsel for both parties grow eloquent and snap objections, but the hearing is distinguished by the absence of wearisome argument about rates, decimals, rate-making points and other terms that cause the layman to seek surcease in sleep.

REPARATIONS ORDERED.

Here is a case wherein the rates already have been decided by the usual tortuous proceedings. The commission has ordered the carriers, like a vanquished nation, to pay "reparations" because former rates were considered too high. All the complaining coal dealers are attempting to do is to prove that they shipped or received some carloads of coal.

Like other I. C. C. hearings, the case has grown old and hoary with the years. Nine years ago the commission began hearings on coal originating in New Mexico and Colorado and shipped into Kansas and Nebraska. After two adverse decisions, the commission finally ruled in favor of the shippers and ordered the railroads to pay back the amount of the overcharges.

Victorious coal merchants who have entered complaints are attempting to recover cash payments amounting roughly to $12 to $15 a carload on all coal shipped in those states from March 31, 1924, to September 30, 1929. A final decision was received in 1931. The railroads, naturally, are

A SCENIC VIEW ON A McDONALD COUNTY ROAD WHICH CAUSED A STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT INVESTIGATION.

A few miles north of Noel, Mo., U. S. highway No. 71 winds along between a clear Ozark stream and precipitous bluffs. The road was paved last June by the Boyle-Pryor Construction Company of Kansas City under a contract which two members of the highway commission said was loath to relinquish cash that already has been entered on their books as net revenue, so they are insisting every merchant prove his shipments in a legal manner. Hence the hearing before Morris H. Konigsberg, examiner.

DEALERS APPEAR SINGLY.

Coal dealers are appearing singly before the examiner, their pockets and portfolios stuffed with freight bills, canceled checks and pages from their journals. They are discovering it is no easy matter to prove to critical railroad counsel that a certain carload of coal was received and paid for nine years ago. Firm names have changed. Shippers are deceased. Memory has grown dim and records musty.

The case is known as the Kelly Milling Company and Southwestern Lumberman's Association case. Hearings already have been held this month in Lincoln, Belleville, Norton, Dodge City and Wichita. The final hearing in Kansas City, which now is in progress, probably will continue two weeks. When this is completed, there will be the usual briefs, reports, recommendations and probably a ruling from the commission some day ordering the railroads to pay.

The more persistent may recover some money, although the complainants' counsel assert the only way they seem able to prove a "car was shipped from anywhere to anywhere is to have a picture." Clyde M. Reed, former governor of Kansas, and B. L. Glover, are counsel for the complainants. Six railroads are represented by their counsel.

HAVEN OF EARLY DRAMA

RICHES OF SHAKESPEARE ARE MADE SAFE FOR THE FUTURE.

Folger Library at Washington Contains More Than 75,000 Volumes and Other Thousands of Manuscripts.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The modernity of science and a deep love for the master dramatist have combined to seal the riches of Shakespeare in a haven virtually immune to any element of destruction.

The Bard of Avon, genius that he was, would find it a task to keep house for his treasured works and relics as neatly and safely as the Folger Shakespeare library is doing it for him.

In a striking new building a few blocks east of the capitol stand row on row of books and manuscripts. Case after case is filled with costly, irreplaceable relics of the Elizabethan age.

WEALTH IN ITS TREASURES.

The library, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Folger, is a memorial to their love for Shakespeare. Years and a fortune were spent in assembling its treasures.

As a library, it contains upwards of 75,000 volumes and several other thousands of manuscripts bearing on the bard and his contemporaries. Its scope includes the entire field of Elizabethan writers.

The extent of the rare Shakespeareana may be indicated by the fact that on the precious first folio, of which fewer than 200 copies are known to be in existence, it possesses seventy-nine, not to mention complete extracts of individual plays which, if assembled, probably would constitute two additional copies. The largest number of copies in any other library is four.

The other folios are similarly represented. Of the quarto editions of the plays and poems, the library has a larger number than is to be found elsewhere, including the unique first edition of Titus Andronicus.

MORE THAN 700 OIL PAINTINGS.

Shakespeare in the fine arts has been made a special subject. The library possesses more than 700 oil paintings (including canvases by Lawrence, Reynolds, Blake, West, Sully and Romney) and many thousands of water colors, etchings, engravings and the like.

The collection of Shakespearean relics and of things identified with the Elizabethan age is equally interesting. There are fine specimens of sixteenth century furniture and early tapestry; a valuable assembly of coins, tokens and medals; examples of horn-books, table-books, diaries and various other things associated with the glorious days of Queen Elizabeth.

Shakespeare on the stage has not been neglected. Extensive purchases were made of playbills and programs, costumes and properties, prompt-books, memoirs, diaries and personal letters of actors. The collection of books, manuscripts and relics relating to David Garrick is rated by far the largest and most valuable in the world.

WORKS OF OTHERS THERE, TOO.

Works of other Elizabethan dramatists and nondramatic writers abound. Perhaps the most interesting single group of books, outside those relating to Shakespeare, is that relating to Francis Bacon. Thousands of books and manuscripts have been assembled on this subject. Included is Bacon's own manuscript, "Confession of Misdeemeanors," as read by him before the house of lords and the house of commons, and the manuscript records of punishments imposed upon him.

Inside the library also are Queen Elizabeth's copy of the Bible and of Chaucer; hundreds of documents signed by her majesty and high officials, and an oak chest and other furniture taken from Ann Hathaway's cottage.

News Behind the News

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Current red tape charges wounded the administration's pride. It does not want the idea to get around the country that it is procrastinating.

Orders have been passed quietly down the line to accelerate everything as much as possible.

So great is the strain for speed that the federal land banks have been ordered secretly to clear up fourteen months of appraisal work before December 1.

Secretary Ickes indignantly denied the tape charge in public, but turned around and privately told the boys inside to apply the spurs.

Works.

The public works program is different. No one except Ickes thought he could put enough money out this winter to do much good. It is impossible to be speedy and careful at the same time in doling out federal funds for such work.

Ickes rushed through allotments of money at a swift pace. He also made lavish predictions. He and his critics are irritated because the allotted money has not been spent.

Government experts figured long ago that it takes six months from the time the money is allocated to start construction on a building. That period has been cut down in numerous instances. Still you cannot build castles in a day.

It is as obvious now as when Ickes started that the bulk of his 3 billion dollars will not reach the laborers before next spring.

Progressives.

The interior department used to be considered a haven for liberals. It is fast losing that reputation.

The situation nearly came to the point of a public airing recently. It was reported, Assistant Secretary Walters intended resigning. He denied it and things calmed down.

Underneath there is a strong conflict between the liberals and Ickes's administrative assistant, Elbert K. Burlew. The liberals say Burlew opens all the mail, and the man who opens all the mail controls the department.

While Burlew is getting closer to Ickes, the liberals are getting farther away.

Most dejected is Henry Slattery. He was long a confidential adviser of Gifford Pinchot, the Pennsylvania progressive. Ickes chose Slattery as his personal assistant, but since taking office Slattery has been on a sidetrack.

Men in the department who want something done go to Burlew. What ranks the progressives most is that Burlew is a holdover from the Hoover administration.

Ickes probably will get his boys quieted down without any resignations or broken bones, but it will require an inner reorganization.

Big Shot.

One of the most influential insiders is a man who keeps his name out of the newspapers. He is Frank Walker, head of the federal statistical co-ordinating agency.

His job gives him contact with every important government department. He is using it to become the inside spokesman for the President with government officials.

That gives him a stature equal with the President so far as they are concerned.

Cotton.

The price of cotton is the hidden force behind the Russian export loan.

The deal was stalemated for a while, but R. F. C. officials got interested again suddenly when they noted that cotton prices needed stimulating.

That is why Chairman Jesse Jones went to see Amtorg officials instead of having them come to him.

It makes the consummation of the deal that much nearer.

Notes.

Henry Ford has hired new advertising agents to conduct his new campaign. The idea of employing war veterans in the Ford plant should be credited to them. General Johnson now speaks of the NRA as "guild government." If you read the history of guild governments in England you will receive some enlightenment on what he has in mind. The R. F. C. has been paying the treasury 3½ per cent for funds it borrows, but there will have to be an adjustment now. Jesse Jones cannot lend money to banks at 3 per cent and pay the treasury 3½ per cent for the same money.

Little Stories for Bedtime

Uncle Wiggily Sees Something.

WHEN Uncle Wiggily reached the apple tree in the field and saw the apples high above his reach and when the rabbit gentleman heard a funny noise in the bushes, he didn't quite know what to think. Yesterday he wanted apples so Nurse Jane could make a pie, but he saw no way of getting the apples off the tree.

"Perhaps this is someone else after apples," said Uncle Wiggily to himself as he stood near a rail fence which was built around the field in which grew the apple tree. "I can't see who it is, but I can hear voices."

This was true enough, for rumbling sounds were coming from the bushes on the other side of the apple tree. And the bushes were so thick that Uncle Wiggily couldn't see through them.

"Maybe it is Mr. Stubbins or Mr. Whitewash, my two bear friends," thought Uncle Wiggily as he stood near the fence, first looking at the apple tree and then at the bushes whence came the voices.

THEY SHOOK THE TREE.

"If Mr. Stubbins or Mr. Whitewash is there," went on the rabbit gentleman, still speaking to himself, "they would either climb the tree for me and pick off some apples or they would jiggle the tree and a lot of apples would fall down so I could pick them up."

But though he waited and looked he saw neither of his kind bear friends coming out of the bushes.

"This is strange," said Uncle Wiggily. "I wonder why they don't come out and get some apples to eat?"

Hardly had Mr. Longears finished thinking this thought to himself than he saw the bushes shiver and shake and he saw two big animals come pushing out of them, walking toward the tree.

"My goodness!" exclaimed the rabbit gentleman.

As a matter of fact Uncle Wiggily was very much surprised and he was also a little bit frightened. Now it is all right to get frightened if you don't run away. You can be brave and frightened at the same time if you make up your mind to stay and see what it is that has frightened you.

That's the way it was with Uncle Wiggily. Though he was frightened a little at the sight of the two big animals, still the rabbit gentleman decided to be brave and bold. So he stood there by the fence, though he

One Cent a Day Brings $100 a Month

Over $670,000.00 Already Paid in Cash Benefits.

One cent a day ($3.65 per year) invested in a National Protective Policy will now buy more accident insurance benefits than can be secured from any other company for any amount up to $10 per year.

This new policy, paying accident benefits up to $100 each month or $1,000 to $1,500 at death, is now being sold to all men, women and children between the ages of 7 and 80 years, whether employed or not.

The benefits for auto accidents of $100 a month (instead of the usual $50 a month) is said by many to be alone worth the entire cost of $3.65 per year. Yet this is but one of the many features of this new and unusual policy.

The National Protective is the largest and oldest company of its kind in the world. It has paid over six hundred seventy thousand dollars ($670,000) in cash to thousands of its policyholders when cash was most needed.

Send No Money

For 10 days' free inspection of policy, simply send name, age, address, beneficiary's name and relationship to National Protective Insurance Co., 705 Pickwick Building, Kansas City, Mo. No medical examination or other test required. After reading policy, which will be mailed to you, either return it or send $3.65, which pays you up for a whole year—365 days. A NAME IN THE NEWS.

A Favorite of Fortune Who Wonders About His Luck.

Arthur Hendrick Vandenberg was getting ready to run for the senate back in 1928 when chance sent him to Washington without a contest. He was appointed by Fred W. Green, then governor of Michigan, to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Woodbridge N. Ferris.

Since then, Vandenberg has become a militant Republican leader in the senate and a factional enemy of ex-Governor Green. He is approaching a campaign for re-election and his quarrel with the former governor threatens to split the party in Michigan. In an effort to avoid party strife, Chase S. Osborn, another former governor, has stepped forward as a peacemaker with the bright suggestion that Vandenberg step aside and permit Green to run unopposed for the senate seat. By way of compensating Senator Vandenberg for this sacrifice, Osborn would allow him to return to the political arena two years later and attempt to win the senate seat now occupied by James Couzens.

Vandenberg, who recently appeared before the Detroit 1-man jury investigating bank conditions and spoke up as a critic of Roosevelt's banking policies, has worked mightily to put pep in the Republican party since entering the senate. He was an organizer of the G. O. P. "young guard," designed to carry on the work for Hoover. He entered politics while winning success as editor of the Grand Rapids Herald.

A SLAYER IS GONE AGAIN

ARKANSAS PRISON GUARDS HUNT HELEN SPENCE EATON.

Homesickness Once More Appears to Have Lured Killer of Two Men Back to White River Country.

(By the Associated Press.)

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 19.—Helen Spence Eaton, the girl who killed her father's accused slayer and then, after parole, confessed she killed another man, has escaped again—the second time within a week.

Homesickness led the pretty twice-convicted slayer to flee the prison farm at Jacksonville and head for the White River country last Thursday. Bloodhounds cornered her in a corn field and back she went to prison.

Last night she disappeared again and guards once more headed toward White River on the theory the girl was homesick again.

Helen Spence Eaton got her first prison sentence, a five-year term, for shooting Jack Worris while a jury filed out of the courtroom to deliberate whether he killed her father. That was at Dewitt.

She was paroled and went back to work in a restaurant. The body of the owner, Jim Bohots, was found in his car one day. Helen was questioned, and released. A few months later, she walked into the office of J. A. Pitcock, chief of detectives here and confessed she had killed Bohots. Her conscience hurt, she said.

Try Your Dentist's Way of tooth cleaning—

USE POWDER

100% Cleansing Properties
Twice that of toothpaste

No Grit—No Pumice
Cannot possibly scratch the softest enamel

Lasts Longer—Costs Less

Powder Cleans and Whitens Teeth—as nothing else can

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleaming white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is

ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder cleans off all stains and tartar, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter. Free from all grit or pumice, it cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums, freedom from pyorrhea and the least possible tooth decay.

Once you use powder you will never go back to a less scientific way of tooth cleansing. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

SELL LESS ABROAD

Export Figures for First Seven Months of 1933 Show Decline in Trade.

FLURRY IN SOME LINES

But Observers Look in Vain for Volume That Spells World Recovery.

BALANCE IS FAVORABLE

America Sold 2 Million Dollars More of Goods Than It Bought in July.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—Some significant things are hidden in the transactions between the United States and the rest of the world, both in the quality and the value of the goods exchanged.

America still is buying less than it is selling, but only a negligible difference. This is not so important, anyway, because we have a plethora of gold. What is vital, however, is: how does the total volume of foreign trade compare with normal and is there a real or only temporary pickup in our sales abroad?

There have been some substantial increases in goods sold. Thus General Motors shows an increase of 109 per cent over last year and this is typical of the motor industry. Unquestionably America has been buying abroad more than usual. But an analysis of the figures reveals that while, in many instances, the dollar volume has gone up materially, the total number of pieces of goods has not increased very much. Thus raw silk imported increased from June to July by about 29 per cent in dollar volume but only 3½ per cent in quantity.

Must Pay More Abroad.

To a large extent this is a reflection of the increased amounts American purchasers of foreign goods are paying in foreign currencies, due to the depreciation of the dollar. As for export trade, the jump in sales reckoned on a dollar volume is also high because of an anticipation of higher prices abroad and also because of a fear that inflation in the United States will cheapen the dollars that American firms and businesses now possess. They feel they better invest their available funds in raw materials needed for future manufactures.

Any increase in foreign trade is to be welcomed as a healthy sign, but it is difficult to derive much comfort out of the figures thus far, for we do not know whether they represent a permanent trend or a temporary flurry. The present uncertainties of dollar exchange, coupled with the doubts as to the point at which gold stabilization ultimately will be attained, are material factors along with possible currency inflation, so that 1933 figures will remain an enigma for some time.

Behind So Far This Year.

The latest available data from the department of commerce shows that, notwithstanding the gratifying increases in July over June, exports for the seven months still were 14 per cent behind the same seven months of 1932 and imports about 11 per cent below the 7-month period of last year.

The relatively small increase in foreign trade is best shown by looking back twenty years. We had in July, 1913, exports of 161 million dollars, while in July, 1933, they amounted to only 14 million dollars, and all this in spite of the fact that America in 1913 was on the gold basis, while this year the dollar has depreciated 30 per cent and hence our prices should be more attractive to foreign purchasers. As for imports, we bought $139,000,000 in July, 1913. In July of this year we bought 143 million dollars and, having sold 145 million dollars, the balance of trade was only 2 million dollars. Taking into account all the invisible items of exchange, the probabilities are that we are less of a creditor nation than we were. There is a big enough balance in our favor at present, but it remains to be seen whether imports will continue to rise if they do, there will be plenty with which the rest of the world can pay its service on its debts. But what is more important now is whether a large export market for American agricultural products, like wheat and cotton, can be re-established. This is still a matter of great uncertainty.

SPORTING COMMENT

Billy Evans Likes Young Yankee Player—'Navy Bill' on His Golden Bears—Why the Snarling Rivalry in Ban Johnson Play-Off—A Point of Sporting Decency.

(By The Star's Sports Editor.)

BILLY EVANS, general manager of the Cleveland club, who usually has a look at any player his scout, Cyril Elapnick, recommends, places his approving stamp on Don Heffner, Baltimore second baseman recently purchased by the Yankees.

Evans wanted Heffner for the Cleveland club but couldn't pay the purchase price demanded when the Yankees entered the competition for the athlete.

"He can pound that ball around second base," says Billy Evans, "and defensively he can do anything that any major league second baseman can do."

"With the hitting power the Yankees command when they are in their stride," says Billy Evans, "Heffner will prove a fine player for them even if he hits no more than .260."

So we'll be watching for this young man in the waning days of the current season and the gladsome spring days of another year.

IF the propaganda coming out of the camp of the Golden Bears of the University of California may be taken at face value Professor Howard Jones of Southern Cal and Professor "Tiny" Thornhill of Stanford should be forewarned and therefore forearmed.

In response to questions "Navy Bill" Ingram admits his team will have color, confuses it will have deception and testifies it will have a wide open attack.

In fact "Navy Bill" Ingram makes it plain that he plans to turn out an eleven that will play a brand of football confusing to the enemy and mystifying but entertaining for the patrons in the stands, especially if they happen to be California minded.

"I plan to give these boys more football-attack and defense—than I've ever given any team," says "Navy Bill" Ingram, coached. "They're ready for it, mentally and physically. I'm convinced they'll be the most dangerous, most interesting team in this section, at least."

AN incident of the Sunday Ban Johnson League's game at Salina.

The game was over. Salina had won decisively. Glenn Rulle, 140-pound shortstop of the Kansas City B. J. went up to First Baseman Villipique of the Salinas and stuck out his hand.

Villipique is a big fellow. He made no move to lift his hand but looked squarely in the eye. Evidently what he saw there incited him to him that there was no belligerency or ill will in Rulle's heart. So out went his hand.

"Aw," said Rulle, "it's all in fun," made a friendly, playful swing at the big fellow's chin and dashed away.

Leading President Goodman of the Kansas City B. J. League had stood near by, watching the incident.

"The big fellow didn't know whether to swing or to shake," Goodman says in recounting the incident. "It was a snarly ball game all the way through," Goodman adds. "When the players would play a snarly ball game to the bench and the field they reminded me of a bunch of bulldogs, growling and showing their teeth."

Goodman says that the Salina manager was in error in charging that Audley intentionally hit the Salina first baseman.

As for the ugly spirit between the rival teams the seconds in this corner see no reason whatsoever why it should be that way. The general public doesn't care who wins. It's all for fun. If these post-season games bring about ill feeling and snarling rivalry this year should see the last of them.

A KANSAS CITY fan who saw the Sunday game at Salina between the Ban Johnson championship teams of Kansas and Kansas City asks a question.

"Villipique, first baseman of the Salina team, was hit by a pitched ball. Manager Suter of the Salina team accused Manager Sanders of having ordered his pitcher to throw the bean ball, but that is no part of this query. The Salina management asked for a runner for Villipique. If he's able to stay in the game he is able to run," the Kansas City manager said. The Salina people said nothing more. Villipique went to first. That he didn't need a runner was evidenced when he stole second. Now what I want to know is this—was Manager Sanders's refusal to grant a runner a lack of sportsmanship?"

I would say that Manager Sanders's refusal showed a lack of the most commendable brand of sportsmanship, although it was typical of the methods of professional baseball, which know little, if anything, of sportsmanship.

If I had been the Salina manager I wouldn't have asked for a runner, but if I had been Manager Sanders when the request came I would have granted it, reserving the right to select from the Salina team the base-runner to take the place of Villipique on the path. That would have been the Salina management, if the thought had been there, from sending their best base-runner into the game while the wounded player was being revived.

This point, of course, isn't a one-sided argument, but you've asked me and I've given the side of the argument I like. I believe in sporting decency and fellowship even when the going is the heaviest. C. E. McBAIR.

DIES FROM RING INJURY.

Knocked Down, Boxer Strikes Head on Floor Boards.

(By The Associated Press.)

SIoux CITY, Ia., Sept. 19.—Whitlow Birdsell, 27, welterweight boxer from Decatur, Neb., died today in a hospital as a result of a basal skull fracture suffered in a bout with Bud Lymer of Sioux City last night.

Birdsell was knocked out in the last round of his 33-week career preliminary, striking his head against the wooden floor boards of the ring.

Hubbell to Start in Series.

St. Louis, Sept. 18.—Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, revealed today he intends to make his world's series bid with three starting pitchers, Hubbell, Schumacher and Fitzsimmons.

They probably will work in that rotation, Hubbell starting the series against the Washington Senators.

"Tarzan" Parmelee has been discarded as a series possibility, any relief work in the series going to Luque or Bell.

"Parmelee is nervous and upset," Terry said today. "He can't forget that twice within the last two weeks his wild shoots have broken arms—Randy Moore's in Boston and Stan Hack's at Chicago—and his confidence has been shattered."

HER GOAL, BIG SERIES

JACKIE MITCHELL WANTS TO GET TO TOP IN BASEBALL.

The Only Girl Professional in the Sport Is Here With the House of David Team.

The one consuming ambition which Jackie Mitchell nourishes is to pitch in a world's series.

Jackie is the only southpaw girl pitcher in professional baseball. She has a fast ball, a curve and a drop, good control and the sight of a Ruth or a Gehrig or a Frisch at the plate doesn't bother her.

Tonight she appears at Muehlebach Field with the bewhiskered House of David team in a game against the Kansas City Monarchs. Jackie probably will hurl a few of the innings, but don't look for her fast ball. She's pitched so much this summer the fast ball is about gone.

But it will come back next spring, she says, when she reports to the Chattanooga Lookouts. Her contract is with that club, the president of which is the effervescent Joe Engle. And if anybody can get Jackie into a world's series it is Joe.

ALWAYS HAS LIKED BASEBALL.

Jackie has the Chattanooga dialect, mild blue eyes, straight hair, which is combed back, and a demure way which rather belies her skill with the baseball. But her hands are extraordinarily large for her size and she has no trouble grasping the ball firmly.

Dolls? They've never meant much to her. It was baseball from the start and when she was several years younger than she is now the one great "Shoelies" Joe Jackson watched her pitch and was convinced.

"I never thought I'd live to see a girl pitch that well," he said.

Then later Engle organized a girls' team in Chattanooga. Characteristically he called them the Englettes. Jackie was the pitcher and she did so well two years ago Engle signed her to a professional contract.

Jackie travels about with her mother, who has been quoted as saying she frowned on her daughter's baseball activities.

IT'S UP TO JACKIE.

"Of course, I don't quite try," she says. "That's not exactly like it, but I think Jackie should do what she wants to."

And Jackie wants to pitch. The other night she pitched against the St. Louis Cardinals. Ten thousand in the stands. One on base, one out and Frisch at bat.

What was that to Jackie? Nothing. Who was Frisch to worry her? A well-directed pitch, a ground ball, a double play and the inning was over.

Now how does she intend to arrange to fulfill her ambition to pitch in a world series game? She doesn't know.

"Next spring I'm going back to Chattanooga and if I continue to improve maybe I'll get the chance. I know it doesn't look very likely, but you can't tell."

Oh, yes, she also likes to hit, but hasn't had much opportunity to display this prowess with the House of David team because she can't be permitted to pitch the entire game. Just a few innings and maybe one time at bat.

SHE LIKES TO HIT.

But one time at bat makes it a chance to smash out a safe hit. Jackie's blue eyes light up and a smile appears around the corners of her mouth.

"I guess I like to hit as well as anything."

Baseball isn't all she can do. Two years ago she was an entrant in the national girls' basketball tournament at Dallas. She has won track medals. But baseball is her business now and the Eldorado for her is the world's series.

JEAN JOLTS THE COLONY

HER MARRIAGE A CHARACTERISTICALLY SIMPLE GESTURE.

By MOLLIE MERRICK.
HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 19.—When Hollywood woke up yesterday morning to find that its most promising starlet had gone and married a cameraman, it was, to say the least, surprised.

Jean Harlow changed her name to Mrs. Hal Rosson with a characteristic simplicity gesture—a marriage at the altar with an airplane pilot and an attendant at the altar for witnesses and an about face from Yuma to Hollywood, where her wedding breakfast consisted of calling in the studio staff and telling them of her newly-made vows.

IT SURPRISED EVERYBODY.
You could have knocked anyone in the studio over with a pikestaff, as Ed Wynn says, because while they had all seen Jean Harlow dancing at Santa Monica frequently with Cameraman Rosson, it simply didn't strike them that a girl who has the picture world by the ears at present would marry a person who could not bring her greater social or financial position.

Rosson is considered one of the camera artists of the colony. Slight, dark, very quiet in demeanor, he reminds one forcibly of Jean's late husband, Paul Bern. The enthusiasm with which the two danced whenever together led the colony to believe that gliding to the music of a band was the link between them. At other times Jean was frequently seen with a very popular young physician and still again she was attended by a handsome young publicist.

SHE HAS A NEW HOME.
A short time ago the young widow of Paul Bern built herself a beautiful home in the Beverly Hills—a home exquisitely appointed and with swimming pool, tennis courts and everything a star could wish for.

This is the second time in recent years that a star has married a cameraman. Lina Basquette, at what was then the height of her fame, married Peverell Marley, an artist of the camera for Cecil B. De Mille. Her name was not then, nor never has been based on the sure foundation that Jean Harlow's popularity has achieved.

In "Dinner at Eight," the platinum blonde walked away with the reviews. She has that sure quality of technique—that simplicity in her work which makes for screen greatness. She has the most beautiful figure in Hollywood today, and the same trick of reaching into the core of the scene which is typical of Katharine Hepburn. Everyone in Hollywood who has followed her career—with its acclaim and its tragedy—wishes her luck in love. She's bound to have luck in her work because she's got what it takes.

Ramon Novarro gave a repeat of his European concert tour for a group of his friends at the Teatro Intimo of his family home. "It turned out to be one of the artistic treats of the season. A very smart group of movie-makers, who know the continent as well as they do the studio lots, gave him that enthusiasm of applause which the professional clique brings to its own upon recognition of tremendous advance.

HIS SINGING SHOWS STUDY.
Novarro sang with new surety and beauty of tone—his comedy was delicious—untouchable by any singer I know of today. His more serious things showed work and development—breadth of tone and range and a singing sophistication which speaks of plenty of work during his so-called vacation.

Jean Sablon-Chanteur, who has been the rage of Paris for some time now, sang a group of songs to everyone's delight. He is reminiscent of Chevalier but with a subtle difference. And a young chap, Andre Renaud, played two grand pianos at the same time in a most amazing fashion.

Outest of the guests was Gloria Swanson with her hair curled up like the petals of a chrysanthemum about a tiny black velvet hat which had a conical top and was perched at a perilous forward angle directly over her right eye. Norma Shearer, Irving Thalberg, Countess Sherrill, Cary Grant, Myra Loy, Marguerite Namar, Elsie Janis and a score of notable clappers their hands off.

SPEAKING THE PUBLIC MIND.
Working Wives and NRA.
To The Star: Gen. Hugh S. Johnson is somewhat disappointed in the number of unemployed who have found work in the early stages of the NRA.

Numerous industries continue to allow married women to work, when there are thousands of men with dependents looking for jobs. There are women who need work, it being their only living, but others have husbands working every day. Why not a clause in the codes prohibiting the employment of married women whose husbands are working?

General Johnson might be surprised at the number of jobs this plan would create.

AT THE START OF THE FINAL INSPECTION OF THE MISSOURI RIVER FOR CERTIFYING IT AS NAVIGABLE.

THE INSPECTION STAFF (top)—Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, chief of engineers of the United States army (left), is the man who will say the final word as to the navigability of the Missouri River between Kansas City and the mouth. With General Brown are (center) Col. R. C. Moore

INTO THE CURRENT (below)—The Sergeant Floyd struck out from shore for the downstream trip on the Missouri River at 8:10 o'clock. With the river at a comparatively high stage, providing a strong current, General Brown hoped to complete the study of the river's condition by tomorrow night. On General Brown's findings will depend the early operation of barge lines to Kansas City. The general, who completes his term as chief of army engineers October 1, hopes to issue the certificate for navigation on the Missouri before that date.

Foresees "Quebec System" Here.
To The Star: The features that make The Star a desirable family newspaper are many, an outstanding contribution being the articles from time to time by A. B. Macdonald. I have just read his beautiful story in last Sunday's Star of the expulsion of the Acadians from Grand Pre, immortalized by Longfellow in "Evangeline"—a story which should delight every school boy and girl, not to speak of us elders.

I especially want to commend Mr. Macdonald's three stories of the Ontario and Quebec liquor control plans. These faithful accounts of the experiences of the Canadian provinces deserve the study especially of members of the legislature.
As I read these articles, they show how history of the liquor traffic repeats itself. We shall presently see how little regard the wets will have for local public sentiment, when local option is ignored. We shall see more than a reiteration of the advertising campaign of the brewers, by the distillers when hard liquor becomes legal. There will be advertising of hard liquors not only in the public press, magazines, circulars and billboards, but also over the radio. There will be a state dispensary system and sales by drink in hotels, restaurants and cafes. The service in such places will be made by waitresses and barmaids. Every effort will be made by the wets to foster and promote the liquor traffic with far worse evils than ever attended the open saloon. The object will be to alcoholize every home in our land.

In this day of highways and radios, we are brought very close together. We must be all wet or all dry. We shall for a short time be all wet. The wets will foist upon us all the evils Mr. Macdonald has pictured in the Quebec system. How long will the people, particularly of Missouri, stand for these outrages? JOHN F. CELL.

Ford Critic.
To The Star: Contributions from James P. Whiteside and G. F. Blakesley defended Henry Ford in his arbitrary NRA stand and eulogized him as an American citizen. This is not an effort to minimize the achievements of a mechanical wizard. However, we must remember that it took more than an inventive genius to make his company a success.

When the Ford company was organized Ford put up his patents and designs and received stock valued at $25,500. Alexander Y. Malcomson received an equivalent amount of stock for guaranteeing payment of $7,000 worth of bills. The paid up capital of $28,000 cash was furnished by John S. Gray, Albert Strelow, James Couzens and others.

A few years subsequent to the inception of the company, Ford bought Malcomson's stock for approximately $175,000. No criticism is directed at the manufacturer for gaining complete control of the company through the acquisition of this stock, but why did men like Senator Couzens sell out once the company had reached the stage where potential profits were enormous?

While in 1914 Ford's $5 daily wage was beyond the dreams of nearly all factory workers, let us recall that the recipients of these wages were advised, early yesterday took nothing of value. The vaults where films are stored were ransacked thoroughly by the robbers, who apparently were looking for money and didn't care for the movies.

that their outside activities would be constantly under surveillance, and if it were determined their mode of living was not in accord with Mr. Ford's ideals they would be subject to immediate dismissal. It was common knowledge that "spotters" were employed to check on the employees. This trait was again manifest last fall, when subordinates were instructed to vote for Mr. Hoover.

Ford's excuse for not parting with even a small portion of his reputed billion is that charity kills initiative. After a careful analysis of his business and personal operations, one cannot help but feel that he has always trod the path of personal aggrandizement.

PRIEST RAPS BANK JURY

THE FINDING IN DETROIT FAVORS STOCKHOLDERS, HE ASSERTS.

Charges of Bleeding by "Smart Money" and Falsification of Records Are Repeated by Father Coughlin.

(By the Associated Press.)

DETROIT, Sept. 19.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, crusading priest, whose charges of falsification of records and predictions of impending federal indictments against bank officials started the Detroit bank investigating jury, today said the findings of the jury that no acts of criminality were evident did not change his views "one iota."

"From the available testimony given," Father Coughlin said, "the United States government is a liar. Senator Couzens is a liar and Father Coughlin is a liar and the United States government, in addition, is an iniquitous thing because it closed perfectly solvent banks."

A CHALLENGE TO UNITED STATES.

"If the United States government is so craven as to rest its case on this testimony, which was given by more or less prejudiced bankers, if the United States government will take complacently this opinion of the open grand jury which was formulated on testimony which eventually was aimed at saving the double liability of stockholders—then I am very much afraid the people of this nation and of Detroit will begin to classify our government as an archangel Capone!"

Father Coughlin, in testimony before the jury several weeks ago, lashed out at Detroit bankers for what he termed "looting widows and orphans" through borrowings for affiliate companies on inadequate collateral. He accused various bank officials of falsifying reports, and asserted several bankers were "doubtful of escaping federal indictment."

TWO BANKS UNDER FIRE.
The federal government now is investigating the closing of the two big national banks, the First National Bank-Detroit and the Guardian National Bank of Commerce.

Discussing the finding of Judge Harry B. Keidan, who sat as the one-man grand jury investigating the banks, that there had been no "smart money" withdrawals from the banks, Father Coughlin said:

"How about the dividends to stockholders of the Detroit Bankers' Company (holding company for the First National) after the bank in 1932 was unable to meet the ordinary obligations of its depositors? That was smart money which went out the back door. In my testimony I also added that if that were not true, then the books had been falsified. We proved by the records that they had undergone long periods of falsification."

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 19.—Alderman W. W. Kelly, a native of Philadelphia, who became one of the most picturesque personalities in Liverpool, died today at the age of 80.

The oldest member of the city council, Kelly came to London as a young man in his early thirties and later owned theaters in Liverpool and Birkenhead.
His greatest enterprise was writing and staging a Napoleonic drama, "The Royal Divorce," in which his wife, Edith Cole, played the part of Empress Josephine. He made a fortune out of the play.

PRICE FIXING ON TRIAL

ATTITUDE OF THE ADMINISTRATION MUST BE SHOWN NOW.

Issue Is Carried to a Decision, With Enemies of Chain Stores Pushing for Regulation in Retail Code.

(By The Star's Lead Wire Service.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The Roosevelt attitude toward price fixing must be defined this week, when the NRA swings into action on the code for 1½ million retail stores. To date the new dealers have managed to skate off the thin ice of the vexing problem. Now a showdown has been forced, with important retailers insisting that competitors be forbidden by NRA to sell goods at less than invoice price, plus a specified percentage.

The recovery administrator, Gen. Hugh Johnson, dislikes price fixing in general. His deputy, A. D. White, has recommended approval of the price fixing provision and Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey's consumers' council opposes it. Sparks will fly before a conclusion is reached.

OIL RAISES A PROBLEM.

As administrator of the oil code, Secretary Ickes narrowly escaped coming to grips with the price fixers last week when a price cutting war in California threatened to upset the program. Cautiously, Ickes admitted he might have "to try something right quick," but the crisis passed before he did it.

While Mrs. Rumsey is supported by her cohorts in the retail code fight, some members of her council are demanding the employment of statisticians to determine fair maximum prices on farm and store products. That demand will be carried to President Roosevelt as soon as possible.

Most of the retail store owners desire a fixed minimum price, but the consumers' council has fixed maximum. Dipping directly as it does into the housewife's pocketbook, price fixing in the retail code would have an immediate effect on the consumer. It is of more vital concern to the man in the street and the housewife than the codes for the so-called basic industries which have received such widespread publicity.

FIGHT ON CHAIN STORES.

The price fixers frankly aim to curb the chain stores, and in this connection it is interesting that President Roosevelt is trying to get the resignation of a conservative G. O. P. member of the federal trade commission, William E. Humphrey, to make way for liberal ex-Governor Phil La Follette of Wisconsin, avowed chain store enemy.

The federal trade commission, incidentally, has the power to determine what "is fair practice" in retail industry.

EXPERTS GIVE LOUD ALARM.

Price Fixing Will Destroy the NRA Program, Report Holds.

(Copyright, 1933, by International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—A blunt warning, based upon a scientific analysis, that the entire NRA program would be defeated if a policy of price-fixing should be adopted was prepared today for Hugh S. Johnson, administrator, by experts of the research and planning division.

The aggressive attitude of the economists, who were brought into the NRA movement to survey its progress and analyze future trends, promised to bring the entire price-fixing issue to a climax within the next few days.

Under the proposed retail code, it is proposed to prohibit sales of goods at less than wholesale cost plus 10 per cent. Some exceptions are provided.

The research and planning division asserts in its report that price-fixing may destroy those who propose it as well as the NRA. The report holds: "The chief volume of business in the country is done in the retail field, where prosperity begins and ends. If prices are fixed, or if code provisions permit the frequent upward fixing of prices while not permitting downward adjustments to meet diminution of purchasing power, only decrease of sales volume or indefinite inflation can result."

First, if prices are fixed and purchasing power lags, there is no way for the merchant to save himself since he would have to continue to hold surplus stocks.

Second, in such a case the government could resort to progressive currency inflation which would have the effect of temporarily raising purchasing power, but would cause a continued increase in prices.

In either case, the economists hold, there is danger that purchasing power will lag. This, in turn, would create more unemployment at a time when the NRA is seeking to put millions "back to work and increasing their purchasing power."

Ed Howe Says—

WE are only lately admitting the power of the educational lobby, plainly responsible for extravagance in schools so great that unpaid teachers are rioting like coal miners or farmers, and many bonds voted to build gorgeous schoolhouses are in default.

A late charge is that the educational lobby has gained control of the government itself; that President Roosevelt leans heavily on a kitchen cabinet composed of professors. I do not know how true the charge is, but it has been made by many of the most responsible newspaper correspondents in Washington. It is admitted these professors are, so far, modest enough, but in the end they will neglect their dangerous educational hobbies.

Woodrow Wilson was one of the best of the professors, and his educational hobbies, his learning that wasn't learning, but the fanaticism of the teacher—made him the most ruinous President we have ever had.

TWO YEARS TO M'DONALD

FORMER U. S. AGENT TO PRISON FOR NARCOTICS SALE.

A Second Sentence, With Kiger and Brown, of a Year and a Day for Contempt, Does Not Increase Total.

W. O. McDonald, former ace investigator for the federal narcotic bureau, was sentenced to two years in prison today by Judge Albert L. Reeves and given another sentence of a year and a day with Harry Kiger and Jess Brown on charges of contempt of court. The latter sentence was run concurrently with the first.

McDonald was found guilty by a federal jury before Judge Reeves June 28 in Springfield on a charge of selling narcotics, but sentence was deferred until today.

LETTER CAUSES A SENTENCE.

The contempt charge against McDonald, Kiger and Brown grew out of a letter received a month ago by Judge Reeves, and signed by Margaret Brown, estranged wife of Jess Brown. The letter stated she had overheard a federal agent call her husband in Springfield and tell him he had better testify for the government against McDonald.

Judge Reeves turned the letter over to William L. Vandewater, United States district attorney, who made a personal investigation of the case, and learned the letter had been written in Kansas City and that McDonald, Kiger and Brown had conspired to have it written. When the information was presented to the court the three men were cited for contempt.

Kiger and Brown were sentenced to the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth.

NO DELAY BECAUSE OF HEALTH.

McDonald, after being sentenced, asked that his prison term be delayed, since he had just undergone an operation. A. B. Loran, assistant United States attorney, addressed the court, and said perfectly good government hospitals were maintained at the prisons and could care for McDonald.

The prison at which McDonald will serve will be left up to the attorney general. McDonald was released on $2,000 bond to allow time to arrange his personal matters before starting to serve his sentence. He will report at the federal building Monday, by which time the prison will have been determined and he will start serving.

FIND MAN SHOT TO DEATH.

Joseph Willis Believed the Victim of an Accident.

The body of Joseph Willis, 76 years old, was found today in the rear yard of a vacant house at 2425 Claremont avenue, Englewood, by Mrs. E. P. Burton, 2433 Claremont avenue. The dead of Willis, which was due to a gunshot wound in the right temple, occurred almost across the street from his home, which was at 2441 Claremont avenue.

Early today he had borrowed a 22-caliber rifle from his daughter-in-law, Mrs. George A. Willis of the home. He left with a statement to the effect he was going hunting for squirrels. Dr. J. S. Bennett, representing the coroner's office in the case, said he believed the death was due to an accident. Willis formerly worked as a laborer along the Missouri River, but had not been employed recently.

Besides the son, George A. Willis, he is survived also by two other sons, Joseph Willis, Jr., 5146 Wabash avenue, and William Willis, 3516 Garner avenue; a daughter, Mrs. Gladys Bell, 5146 Wabash avenue, and two brothers, John Willis, 3106 Wabash avenue, and Ensley Willis, 2944 Wabash avenue.

RITES FOR VICTIMS OF BURNS.

Services for Kansas Child Will Be Held Tomorrow.

Funeral services for Donald Harry Morash, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd C. Morash, 1723 Richmond avenue, Kansas City, Kansas, who died yesterday at Mercy hospital from burns suffered apparently while walking in his sleep, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow at the George H. Long mortuary in Kansas City, Kansas. Burial will be in Memorial Park cemetery.

Mrs. Morash was awakened by screams early yesterday morning and discovered the child in the hallway of the home with his nightgown in flames. She extinguished the fire with her hands, suffering severe burns in the attempt to save the life of her son. Her belief was that the child had walked in his sleep and ignited a match.

Mrs. Catherine Hall, 93 Years Old, Moved Here in 1865.

Mrs. Catherine Hall, one of the early residents of Jackson County, died today at her home at Hall Summit on Raytown road just south of Independence at the age of 93 years. Her death was caused by pneumonia following a fall she suffered recently.

Mrs. Hall was born in Burke County, Pennsylvania, of Quaker parents. The family moved to Danville, Ill., where she married John F. Hall, and the young couple shortly afterwards came to Kansas City, in 1865. Mrs. Hall, an early day lumber merchant, died in 1886. Mrs. Hall has lived near

TWO SCHOOL BELLS RING

PEMBROKE-COUNTRY DAY AND BARSTOW BEGIN FALL SESSIONS.

At the First Annual Assembly of the Merged Boys' Institutions, an Enrollment of 210 Is Reported.

For the first time in the history of the schools the students of Pembroke and Country Day schools met together today in a general assembly. The occasion was the opening day of the Pembroke-Country Day School for Boys. Approximately 210 boys enrolled today, the largest number in the history of either school.

The Rev. Claude W. Sprague opened the assembly at 9 o'clock today with an invocation. Justin D. Bowersock, representing the board of trustees of the school, made a short talk, as did Harold Jones of the alumni group.

David H. Groesch of the school faculty sang a solo. Howard E. A. Jones, head master of the school, gave the principal speech of the morning, telling of the merger of the two schools and of future plans.

Regular classes started immediately following assembly. Due to the large enrollment the third floor of the dormitory is open for occupancy for the first time.

Barstow school, Fifth and Cherry streets, opened its forty-ninth school year today. A large upper school enrolled today with a senior class of seventeen girls. The middle, lower, kindergarten and play school will open Monday.

Classes today started at 9 o'clock and were dismissed at 12:30 o'clock. Tomorrow the regular schedule will be followed, with school closing at 3:30 o'clock. An enrollment of approximately 150 girls is expected.

CALL TO CIVIC AMBITION

VISIT TO MILWAUKEE SPURS JOSEPH MEINRATH TO SPEAK.

Kansas City, He Asserts, Should Resume Beautification in the Spirit of the Late George E. Kessler.

Returning from a vacation sojourn in Milwaukee, which he long has admired as a finely planned city of parks, boulevards and squares, Joseph Meinrath is sounding a new watchword for his own Kansas City. It is "Revive the Kessler Civic Standards."

"Travel refreshes the civic sense," Mr. Meinrath said. "It whets the civic appetite and ambition. In a few weeks of observation of the city planning of Milwaukee and Chicago, in the great birth of art that has come to Kansas City and her coming rebirth of music and other cultural forms, I sense one outstanding basic need in the completion of a cultural program."

PRE-EMINENT LANDSCAPE ARCHITECT.

"That is, to resume the beautification and order of Kansas City in the spirit and performance of the period when the community lost its pre-eminent landscape architect, the late George E. Kessler."

"Under the Burnham plan, Chicago was destined to become in time the most beautiful commercial city in history. Under the less ambitious, but more universal development of Milwaukee, a wonderful order and simple beauty has grown into being and is being maintained and enhanced in a pre-eminent manner."

"Coming back to Kansas City, the atmosphere and work of Kessler is everywhere apparent and the loss in his going equally so; for we should have instantly reinforced ourselves with another professional of the same type to uphold the standards we adopted, and continue the vision of beauty and order without cessation."

"What I have seen elsewhere tempts me to say the two great projects before the community in this line are, first:

Complete the Paseo, one of the noblest thoroughfares in the country, and in many respects one of the most important; and second, take the union station district out of its planlessness."

Both projects are on such broad lines that to forget the Kessler standards of development in either is to nullify much that he had planned in both."

"There should be a certain percentage each year of the center plots of the Paseo developed as are miles of center plots in Milwaukee and on the order of the center plots of our Ward Parkway, with appropriate shrubbery and other details that would evidence Kessler progress and finish. It might take years to develop the entire length of the Paseo, but it has no right to be an 'orphan' in the plan of beautifying our public spaces."

"As to the union station area, we have four such center plots, running from McGee trafficway to Broadway, each under separate treatment. The mayor has requested the municipal art commission to present a uniform plan for all four for the contemplated Field of Honor embracing that area. It is hoped that plan will be ready by the first of the year, and if so and if it is satisfactory, promotion may proceed for a Lincoln statue to be placed at the west end of the Field of Honor."

But the entire union station district should be placed under the same careful study and treatment as was provided professionally in the treatment of the Liberty Memorial grounds. To embellish the latter in the highest degree of order and beauty and leave the surrounding public spaces as an unbalanced mixture of beauty, disfigurement and ugliness, would be to invite such invidious comparisons as would pull the reputation of the city down to an ordinary level."

SHOCK TO RETURNING TRAVELER.

"Every time one leaves the city to go sightseeing elsewhere, and one comes out of the union station on returning by day or night, the lack of the Kessler standards, the lack of civic correction, shocks the sight and senses. The recovery of American cities is going to create tremendous competition, acquire population and draw visitors through cleanliness, orderliness and attractiveness in city appearance. Our parks and boulevards, our residential districts, cannot be held up forever in this competition without a city planned right in every one of its parts."

"Business districts must be organized intensively for this purpose over the city. All residential sections over the city, wherever located, must be organized under this thought. In brief, there must come a rejuvenation of the entire community for city planning, city order and city pride."

CHICAGO AND MILWAUKEE AWAKE. "The citizens of both Chicago and Milwaukee are alive with new civic determination. Kansas City must keep step with the idea of city planning progress as well as commercial progress."

"A great city plan, park and municipal art movement must be a part of the present recovery plans. It must begin again with renewal of love of city, love of civic order, love of natural and man-made beauty as in Kessler's time."

"And then will come the model city Kessler dreamed and planned for us and the model city which should be ready to be exhibited to the world by February 22, 1933, the centennial anniversary of Kansas City's incorporation. To those who think that is a long way off, it must be remembered that accomplishments of the Kessler sort generally take a long time. The parks and boulevards of which we are proud were not built in a day."

INDICTED IN $71,000 ROBBERY. Murder of Three Men Also Fought in Fort Worth Crime.

(By The Associated Press.) AMARILLO, Tex., Sept. 19.—An indictment charging O. D. Stevens, D. W. "Bill" May and M. T. Howard with participation in the $71,000 Texas & Pacific mail robbery in Fort Worth last spring was returned by a grand jury in United States district court today.

The three men also were held for murder, which the state charges grew out of a division of the loot. The slain men were John Sturdevant, Henry Rutherford and J. B. Rutherford. Stevens, May and Howard will go to trial on the murder charges October 2 in Tarrant County district court.

MORE SLEEP SICKNESS

FOUR NEW CASES ARE REPORTED TO OFFICIALS HERE.

The Illness of Man Taken From the County Jail Has Not Been Established Yet as Encephalitis.

The diagnosis yesterday as encephalitis of the case of Charles W. Hanson, federal prisoner, had not been confirmed today by physicians at General hospital, and he was moved from the mental ward to one of the medical wards for further observation.

Hanson was taken to the hospital from the county jail yesterday after Dr. Paul V. Woolley, physician engaged by the government to care for the health of federal prisoners here, had examined Hanson and believed him a victim of sleeping sickness.

Laboratory tests at the hospital today failed to show symptoms of the malady in the patient, who apparently is suffering from a mental disorder. Four new victims of sleeping sickness were reported today by the health department. Mrs. M. H. Dooley, 5801 Virginia avenue, and Mrs. James C. Fling, 3236 Cleveland avenue, were admitted late yesterday to St. Joseph hospital. The case of Mrs. Maggie Miller, 423 Potter avenue, was reported from General hospital and Frank Johnson, a Negro, 804 East Third street, was admitted to General hospital No. 2, suffering from the malady. His was the first case reported among Negroes.

Figures on the sleeping sickness cases treated in Kansas City, Mo., hospitals, not including other Jackson County or Kansas City, Kansas, cases, since the first case was reported here August 19, follow:

A 2-YEAR WATCH ON MALADY.

Observation Period of Recovered Patients Is Established.

(By The Associated Press.)

St. Louis, Sept. 19.—Recovered "sleeping sickness" patients will remain under the watchful eye of public health officials for about two years to determine whether delayed effects of the illness manifest themselves, it was announced today.

So far, health officials and physicians attending cases of encephalitis, have found virtually no unfavorable after effects, but the 2-year period of observation was decided upon in the hope of gaining more substantial knowledge of the strange malady.

With the death toll standing at 157 in greater St. Louis since mid-July, the epidemic continued today to show definite signs of abatement.

THE LATEST MARKET NEWS

HOGS AND CATTLE ADVANCE.

Prices of both hogs and cattle scored very strong advances at Kansas City today, with hogs 15 cents higher in the active but unsteady market. Beef steers advanced 10 cents, and heifers, including yearlings, ruled steady to 15 cents higher. Other classes of cattle were steady, and stockers and feeders steady to strong.

A few early sales of native lambs and a good lot of mature fat sheep were mostly steady. Sales of range lambs were mostly steady to 10 cents higher to packers.

The top for fat hogs at $4.55 on a choice 180 to 220-pound average, established a new high since late July. Bulk of the good to choice 170 to 240-pound averages ranged from $4.45 to $4.55; the 260 to 300-pound averages from $4.35 to $4.45; the 140 to 160-pound kinds from $3.75 to $4.45. Packing was much more active, mostly at $2.50 to $2.55 a few to $3.35.

The continuation of food buying by Continental importing countries is supporting the Canadian wheat price in spite of hedging sales and the increasing value of the Canadian dollar. American wheat exports to the United Kingdom last year were valued at $1.2 billion, compared with $1.1 billion in 1964. The United Kingdom arrivals of wheat and flour since August 1 are 3,576,000 bushels, compared with 3,380,000 bushels in 1964. The United Kingdom received 3,815,000 bushels and the continent 3,880,000 bushels, a total of 9,696,000, compared with 8,688,000 bushels in 1964 and 8,858,000 for the same time last year.

strain men of the union at the opening session of the annual convention of the Drain and Feed Dealers National Association in Chicago yesterday were urged by the Chicago Board of Trade to do their "utmost as grain men and citizens to aid the Washington administration in its struggle to bring back better times."

Mr. Carey said the board of trade had concluded co-operation with the government in its recent action on the grain exchange code is confirmation of its determination to lend all possible assistance to the government in its efforts to bring back better times.

Those criticizing the administration's farm policy, and he had "yet to observe one move to change the farm situation," said the professional farm spokesmen for any time."

"And it is the annoyances of these professional spokesmen, and not the government, that make it so difficult the work of the department of agriculture and its agricultural adjustment administration to bring about a more effective farm program outlined by congress."

"While all of us in the agricultural trades are not in agreement with the government's insistent monthly decrease since late in 1932 September usages were 1,000,000 bushels.

Directors of Erie-Rio-Manhattan Transp. Co., N. Y., said New York City traction, have voted to redeem 1 million dollars of the company's 2-year 6 per cent notes on October 1, 1934, and to issue $1,000,000 of the company-dollar issue to $1,500,000 of the Richfield Oil Company of Los Angeles back on a cash profit basis. W. C. McDuff, receiver, announced today. Richfield has a cash profit of $1,000,000 and its 1934 earnings for August, September and October are expected to exceed that figure, he said. The company reported a loss of $1,000,000 for the first six months of 1934 after all charges.

How Sound Company, a copper producer today lifted its annual dividend basis to from 40 cents previously paid. Directors will pay quarterly disbursement of 10 cents.

grain elevator. The industry of agricultural production, which can at least have open minds, confidence in the leaders who are carrying out the program, and the willingness to give reasonable assistance to a government that never before has faced such momentous problems, is the only way to solve the problem of farmers looking to solution."

Not a change was shown in today's report of holdings of grain in Kansas City public elevators, it being a statement of the stocks at a private tank and vessel yard.

Most of the elevators operating under the new code close all day Saturday and Sunday. There are no loads of grain and naturally there are no sales. As a result the totals, which are affected by the elevator closings, are not available.

Elevators probably will continue the practice of closing down on Saturday until there is a change in the code. The effect on the grain trading business which would require their working on Saturday. Total stocks of grain in the seven public warehouses as of September 21, 1918, were 22,022 bushels of wheat, with 37,614.84 bushels of corn, 2,222 bushels of wheat and 2,890.64 bushels were corn.

A Chicago Board of Trade membership closed today at $170.75 net to the buyer, an increase of 10 cents from the previous day.

Muri McDonald of the Iowa State college estimated that 90 per cent of the eligible wheat growers of Iowa would sign contracts for wheat adjustment before September 25, 1918. She said that the fall payments to Iowa wheat growers would be around 011, compared with $170.186 in August, 1917, while gross was $2,894.49, against $2,227.440.

Kansas City Southern had August 1918 net operating income of $141,660, against $153,774 a year ago.

Directors of Southwestern Light and Power Company have declared a dividend of 2 cents a share on the $6 cumulative preferred stock, which is the first dividend on a normal rate, due to inadequacy of earnings.

High Blood Pressure Cause
Remains Very Real Mystery

But it remains a mystery. And a real mystery. Here are two men who live in the same city, who are subjected to the same environment. They may—as I have frequently seen it, because I used to examine for partnership life insurance a good deal—even be partners in business, same habits, eat the same kind of food; yet one will have a normal blood count, while the other will have a head of steam nearly twice as great.

It is natural for the thought to rise that his increased pressure the heart and blood vessels work under is due to some internal driving force. We all know that physical and chemical changes are the basis of emotions as the result of mental and emotional states. When a person is extremely tense, working habitually in a state of excitement and push, why should not the blood pressure be raised?

With this basic idea a Boston physician, Dr. J. H. Scheraga, has studied the personalities of patients with high blood pressure. He found that such subjects have "a distinct type of personality. Their personality is characterized by increased psycho-motor activity. They are dynamic, hyper-

DANGER IN PRICE FIXING.

The NRA will be getting on dangerous ground if it permits price fixing in the pending retail codes. The difficulty lies in the danger that prices to the consumer will advance sharply and unnecessarily, outstripping his capacity to buy.

The situation is of vital importance. It affects the great mass of the public far more than the codes of the big basic industries. For it carries with it the possibility of higher living costs.

Two considerations are to be borne in mind. One is that the underlying theory of the NRA relies largely on volume to cover increased costs. It is assumed that most of the overhead will remain unchanged, and that increased costs from shorter hours and minimum wage scales would be taken care of by increased sales.

The other consideration is that with retailers protected by the code from unfair competition through long hours and low pay, the price situation largely would take care of itself. If a store could be assured that its competitor would not have unfair advantages from hours and wages, it could meet any competition by efficient management.

Possibly one additional safeguard might be warranted. It might be in accordance with public policy that articles should not be sold below cost by the retailer. But here one grave danger is evident. That is the danger of setting up an arbitrary cost standard that would deprive the consumer of the advantages to be derived from dealing with efficient merchandisers.

Thus, it is proposed in the retail code that the cost shall be what is paid by the small corner drug store for its goods. The neighborhood drug store has its place derived from convenience to its patrons. But there is no reason why the community in general should be deprived of the lower prices that might legitimately be offered by the efficient large store.

Again there is a provision that no standard article should be sold at less than 21 per cent below the retail price set by the manufacturer. Here once more the consumer would be penalized by a denial of the advantages of the efficiently managed store.

If a store with low operating costs, although paying standard wages and reducing its hours, is able to sell for 60 cents an article priced nominally at $1, why should the consumer be forced to pay 79 cents?

The consuming public has a vital interest in its ability to purchase goods at the lowest prices that good management can offer, with standard wages and hours of work.

If the NRA by arbitrary restrictions forces high prices it will be adopting an unsound policy at the expense of the public. Such a policy will risk arousing widespread resentment against the whole plan, with diminished purchases and lessened employment.

What About Motor Car Speeding?

Police report excessive speed was responsible for the fatal automobile accident on Independence avenue yesterday. It is an old story. Excessive speed is responsible for a large share of accidents.

But what are the police doing about it? The time to deal with such accidents is by clamping down on speeders. The police can make speeding unpopular if they set themselves to do so. The policy of lax enforcement of the traffic code is a contributing cause to the large number of automobile fatalities this year.

Public sentiment should be strongly behind the law enforcement committee of the council, when it waits upon the police authorities in the near future on instruction from the board of governors, to urge greater activity in the important department of traffic control.

An Early Navigation Prospect.

It is an entirely reasonable attitude that is assumed by Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, the chief of army engineers, with respect to use of the Missouri River from Kansas City to the mouth. On his inspection trip on this portion of the stream, beginning today, General Brown does not expect to find perfection or a fully completed channel, but he states frankly that if he finds navigation would be warranted he will issue the certificate that will enable the Inland Waterways Corporation to make an immediate start with barges.

This is all the assurance that could be expected in advance, and the hopes of Kansas City and surrounding area will follow the inspection in measurable confidence that the fair conditions the chief of engineers lays down will be met.

As General Brown indicates, and as is understood by those familiar with channel progress, there is a comparatively small amount of work that remains to be done. This, when finished, would leave the channel completely free of obstructions or hazards. It is estimated that 3½ million dollars will be required to do this remaining work. This expenditure has not been authorized, but it should be at once, to the end that returns may be had on the investment already made in the channel. The sum still needed is exceedingly small, but the importance attached to it is considerable.

Navigation, however, or the definite plans for it, will not need to await this allotment. The preparations can be carried forward, and the start of actual navigation made while the small amount of improvement still remaining is being done. The time for realization on this section's asset in the river seems virtually at hand.

Preserving a Free Press.

A few years ago the section of the annual report that Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia school of journalism has just submitted to the president of Columbia university, dealing with the freedom of the press, would have attracted very little attention. Indeed, so generally was it recognized throughout the civilized world that a free press and the right of free speech were indispensable to the maintenance of the democratic system of government, that Dean Ackerman probably never would have thought then of mentioning the fact in his report. But, as he has pointed out, developments in this country, as well as abroad, have placed the importance of these fundamental liberties in a new light.

As to the results of the suppression of a free press in countries like Russia, Italy, Germany and Japan, there is no need for discussion. They speak for themselves in a public opinion, molded and completely controlled by certain militaristic leaders. In this country the situation obviously is different. But it is not necessary to question for a moment the adherence of the present administration to all the traditional American ideals of individual liberty to see in that situation an element of danger.

With the country organized for a great national attack upon economic conditions and with the government engaged for the first time since the World War upon a definite program of propaganda, the temptation for fanatical supporters of the government's plan to consider any criticism of it as little short of treason is only too evident. That temptation must be resisted. Fortunately, the danger of indulgence is slight, but the fact that a man of the standing of Dean Ackerman has seen fit to point out the danger cannot be ignored. The liberty of the American newspapers to record and comment upon every aspect of the government's recovery program is necessary for the protection of the American people against such disasters as have always followed eventually upon the suppression of the freedom of the individual.

Kansas City Develops.

The development of cultural advantages in Kansas City this year, through the opening of the new University of Kansas City and the William Rockhill Nelson Gallery of Art and the formation of the Kansas City Philharmonic orchestra, will find the physical appearance of the city also undergoing a substantial improvement. Two particularly handsome public buildings shortly will be added to the group of new privately-owned structures that have so altered the skyline of the business district in the last few years. Both the towering Jackson County courthouse and the great municipal auditorium will enhance the architectural interest of that district and the latter for the first time will provide a suitable home for a symphony orchestra in Kansas City.

Coupled with these building operations downtown is the important improvement going on about the union station plaza, including the erection of the new postoffice and the completion of the north front of the Liberty Memorial, while farther south the magnificent Nelson Gallery is now coming into use and the campus of the new university undoubtedly will be gradually developed. Kansas City, thanks to its park and boulevard system and to its residential districts, already has come to be known as one of the more attractive cities of the country. With its new cultural institutions and public buildings, the city's reputation as a good place in which to live should be correspondingly enhanced.

SUGAR, THE GREAT WHITE SPECTER THAT FILLS CUBA WITH IDLENESS AND UNREST

Present Political Troubles in the Island Republic and Most of Its Past Ills Based on the Cane Industry and Efforts of Controlling Capital, Mainly American, to Protect Itself—Country Now a Vast Warehouse and Workers Virtually in Slavery.

AN American fleet, sent hurriedly to waters adjacent to Cuba, hesitates vigilantly there, not only for the protection of American citizens, but also to keep a watchful eye on the economic resources in which this nation has a vast interest. One-third of Cuba's territory, nearly 90 per cent of the cultivable lands of the island, is owned or controlled under long-time leases by Americans or American corporations. The remainder, it has been estimated, is largely mortgaged to American banks and creditors. Eighty per cent of the sugar industry belongs a war against sugar cane, which perpetuated in the golden island, as an inexhaustible tradition, the despotism of the majordomo and the hatred of the slave.

Sugar and geography made Cuba declare war on Germany. Geography and sugar made Cuba more than an American vassal. Both have cost Cuba dearly, most subsequent disasters bring due to her willingness to cooperate with us during the war, to bend every effort to expand her sugar production at the expense of all other groups.

After the brief postwar "dance of the mil-

to citizens of the United States; the remainder is controlled chiefly by American creditors. Cuba's second industry—tobacco—also is mostly American. Nearly all the banks, railroad, street car lines, electric plants, telephone systems and other public utilities are owned by capital from the United States. The dominant position in all this American enterprise has, during recent years, been assumed by large banks of the United States.

Carlton Beals, an authority on Cuba, recently wrote in discussing the affairs of Cuba that "nowhere else, certainly not in the United States, has rugged capitalism had a freer hand than in Cuba. Yet in few places in the world today are conditions quite as bad. Denied economic justice, the people can only be kept down by brutal despotism, iron-heeled militarism. Thus all political doors are closed to the honest and capable."

FIRST COMMERCE CLANDESTINE.

American commerce with Cuba dates back to Spanish colonial days of smuggling and piracy. Clandestine commerce flourished before our own independence, but not until the early nineties of the eighteenth century were Cuban ports opened to neutral ships carrying food and clothing. Up until the end of the nineteenth century our stake largely was trade, more or less clandestine.

The American sugar industry in Cuba began to gain control during the Gomez period, consolidated its position under Menocal. His second term and the subsequent administration of Zayas and Machado represented the financial consolidation of American interests, a shift of control from the sugar barons to the banks and public utilities. The opening of the Panama Canal made Havana far more important as an international trade post.

"These shifts," Beals says, "were paralleled by political changes and the development of a paternalistic Caribbean policy by the United States. The earlier concession-sugar period was represented by the Taft-Magoon intervention. Financial concentration was featured by the meddler or 'proventive' policy of Crowder. Full financial consolidation coincides with the hands-off policy begun with Harding, carried on by Coolidge, Hoover and Ambassador Guggenheim. In other words, financial rule, become more direct and powerful, needs to call upon the state department only in subterranean ways or in times of crisis."

Marquez Sterling, former ambassador, once said, "Sugar cane does not make colonies happy or a people cultured, or republics opulent; and the independence we won with the war against Spain we must consummate in lions" in 1920, Cuba plunged to economic disaster, a prostrate role of economic individualism; she has remained bed-ridden until this day—thirteen long years.

BANKS DOWN WITH SUGAR.

The banks tumbled with sugar. They could not unfreeze their sugar assets. Those assets had, for the most part, depreciated beyond recovery.

The emergency tariff bill raised the duty on Cuban sugar from 1.0048 to 1.60 cents. American finance won a victory over Spanish financial influence in the island, and the victory meant, as time went on, the absorption of the entire sugar industry by American banks.

When Cuban sugar was down to 1½ cents a pound a commission was sent to Washington to lobby for favorable tariff rates. There they encountered the best sugar interests strongly entrenched in the various congressional committees. The beet sugar people demanded that Cuba limit her crop to 2½ million tons for 1922, about 60 per cent of the previous 3-year average—a colossal blow. Cuba decided against restriction. The Fordney tariff at once jumped the duty to 2.30 cents on world sugar; 1.84 on Cuban sugar, the highest schedule since the 1890 trade war with Spain. Cuba could not hurdle the tariff.

Today, the white ghost of Cuba is sugar, Beals says. This specter of Cuba's one flourishing industry stalks the sun-drenched land, striking fear through every heart. Her consort is black-robed tyranny; behind her is a trail of murder and desolation.

Toward the end of 1930 there arrived in Cuba Thomas Lincoln Chadbourne. Cuba was told there was a gentleman's agreement with American producers to restrict production. His plan created a corporation to be responsible for the expenses of the sugar producers—in reality for the bankers' loans—through the emission of 42 million dollars in bonds to be used to buy 1½ million tons of sugar from existing supplies, largely impounded by the banks, and retire it from the market. The final agreement between the republic of Cuba, the New National Sugar Exporting Corporation, and two large New York banks, was signed December 16, 1930.

SCHEME TO PROTECT BANKS.

"It has been charged that 4 million dollars went out in mysterious payments," Beals states. "The whole scheme was devised apparently to permit the banks to get back their bad loans; to permit the large foreign Central banks to break their contracts 'with the growers.'"

"Subsequently Cuba, Java, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary and Belgium, through Chadbourne and sugar representatives, entered into an agreement that for the 1930-31 crop Cuba would cut production 33 per cent; Poland and Hungary, 14 and 5 per cent, respectively. All the other countries were permitted to increase their output from 3 to 27 per cent.

"Cuba was further weakened by an executive decree which forced the companies—otherwise liable under American laws as a combine in restraint of trade—to form a sugar pool to hold in reserve 700,000 tons in addition to that to be bought by the corporation. This, also was another bankers' maneuver to jockey up the price temporarily and get out from under regardless of subsequent effects on the industry as a whole."

Thus, it is argued that for every pound of sugar that Cuba holds off the market, other countries rush in to provide one. While Cuba furnished 21.6 per cent of the world's supply in 1925, in 1931 it provided only 11 per cent.

Ordinarily the Cuban cane worker received $1.50, even up to $2.50 a day; now, wages for one month of cutting do not exceed 25 cents a day; in Camaguey the worker can earn only 9 cents, and in some places 3 cents.

This conversion of Cuba from a great sugar emporium to a great sugar warehouse with nobody but the warehouse keeper to foot the bills, has significance for the average American. Mr. Beals says the consumer is paying far more than he should for his sugar, and our tariff, in the past responsible for unjustly increasing the price of sugar for the consumer to benefit the artificial beet sugar industry, has, by the Smoot-Hawley schedule, been increased, and now stands shoulder to shoulder with the Chadbourne plan to further prejudice the real interests of our own country. He estimates these factors have added 247 million dollars of annual cost to the American consumer.

Laid upon the United States, Cuba would stretch from New York to Chicago, and its width varies from twenty-five to not more than 124 miles. Its distances are all measured from a 24-carat diamond set in the floor under the golden dome of the new 17-million-dollar capital building in Havana.

COSTLY MEMENTO OF MACHADO.

The capital and the new paved central highway, built for 705 miles at a cost of 120 million dollars through the center of the island, were major features of the public works program of the deposed President Machado, undertaken as unemployment relief measures when the price of sugar fell.

American warships riding at anchor under the obsolete guns of ancient Morro castle are only the latest chapter in Cuba's colorful history. A huge iron chain once was stretched across the bottle-neck entrance of that same harbor to keep out pirate fleets.

Morro Castle, built in 1597, once was assailed by the American revolutionary patriot, Israel Putnam, with troops from New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. In later years Gen. Leonard Wood ruled it while governor general during the three years of American military occupation after the Spanish-American war.

From the massive Castillo de la Fuerza, the walls of which are still standing in Havana, De Soto started on his ill-fated expedition that resulted in the discovery of the Mississippi River. Atop its watch tower for four years his young bride daily scanned the horizon for his return, and died at last of a broken heart.

Crews of American warships in Havana harbor can see the monument to the battleship Maine, whose mysterious sinking started the conflict with Spain in 1898. It recalls Theodore Roosevelt's charge with his Rough Riders up San Juan Hill, the famous, famous, but futile, effort to bottle up Admiral Cervera's Spanish fleet in Santiago harbor by sinking the collier Merrimac in a narrow channel, and the storied dash of the battleship Oregon around South America to aid in the fight against Cervera.

But today under Cuba's calm, blue sky stalks the white ghost of sugar, sad memory of better days.

KANSAS NOTES.

The bass drum lost at Topeka the other day by a careless musician has been located, says the Chanute Tribune, but inexplicably Iola is still searching for a motor car equipped with a callopie and a broadcasting system.

"Is it a boy or girl?" an anxious mother at a Concordia hospital asked the nurse, Tom Klene reports in the Blade-Empire.

"A boy," the nurse replied.

"Good Lord, another duck hunter," moaned the woman as she turned toward the wall.

THE BOY WHO MADE GOOD.

"Peanuts?" called the butcher along in front of the grandstand at the fair one afternoon last week. "Throw me up a sack. I'll catch it," called a customer from the top row of the stand—which was done. "Throw your nickel down. I'll get it," called back the peddler—which was also done. But he missed the nickel which slipped down the back of a young lady, inside her dress. "Make good. Let's see you get it," jeered the crowd while the butcher looked rather foolish. Then the young lady stood up, jiggled herself a little, the nickel dropped to the steps, the salesman picked it up and moved on.—Clay Center Times.

The McPherson Republican's experience is that it doesn't take platonic love long to run a temperature.

A woman who had been visiting in Missouri came home with stained hands and a mean disposition, reports Flint Hills Peggy in the Cottonwood Falls Leader. She says that wherever she went, her relatives were peeling peaches to can and she had to go to help. She said she saved money all spring to take a vacation and then spent it with a pan of peaches on her lap and a paring knife in her hand and not a peach has she put up for herself.

In the society section of The Star last Sunday was the announcement of the engagement of Miss Helen Ruth Cortner of Kansas City to Mr. Angelo C. Scott of Iola, Kas. The marriage will take place October 7. Thus the last of the "three bachelor musketeers" of Kansas young newspaper men disappears from the state of single blessedness. The trio, consisting of Jack Harris, Young Bill White and Angelo Scott was a popular target a few years ago for all their editorial elders who wished to hasten them into matrimony. Jack and Young Bill succumbed two years ago. Miss Cortner formerly lived in Iola, but came to Kansas City several years ago with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Cortner. Mr. Scott is the son of Charles F. Scott, publisher of the Iola Register for more than fifty years, a former member of congress, and a leader of Kansas Republicans for many years.

President Roosevelt is going to make a speech in New York early in October. The Pittsburgh Headlight notes that by good fortune—or something—the visit to New York will be just about the time of the opening game of the world series.

Weather bear paragraphs from the Concordia Blade: Our admiration of Al Jolson since he socked Walter Winchell faded somewhat last night, when we heard Al sing his own composition about the blue eagle. We decided it was Walter's turn....Parents are funny; they start their kids out with spending money enough to buy a lot of trouble and then wonder why they bring home so much of it....The Alchison Club says Eve must have been very happy with no other woman for Adam to smile at. Not much she wasn't; she was very unhappy because there was nothing to suspect him of....One Concordia wife says she knows that good times are returning; her husband is worrying now in terms of hundreds instead of tens.

BILLY SUNDAY'S WOR.

This department fails to catch the humor some writers have professed to see in the wrongdoing that entered so largely into the life of George Sunday, son of "Billy" Sunday, evangelist, who is believed to have ended his own life at San Francisco. The word always has had and doubtless always will have its percentage of worthless and vagabond sons of righteous fathers and mothers. Despite careful upbringing and instructions as now best to live in the sight of God, these derelicts become at best riff-raff, at worst criminals of the worst type. Maybe it's a genealogical throw-back or a what-if-cre-you-but the type is so common that every reader of these lines knows of four to forty instances of kind, considerate and painstaking parents who have had one or more proverbial black sheep in their family. "Billy" Sunday and "Ma" no doubt did everything they knew to do to rear their son, George, to fear God, tell the truth and follow out the nearly perfect will of Jesus, the Christ for whom they have spent most of a lifetime winning converts—and this whether or not one believes in their methods. But George wasn't built that way. And that was something about which a devout father and mother could do nothing. There have been tens of thousands of fathers and mothers who could testify to this.—Hays News.

THERE ARE MANY MOLECULES.

Illustrations Give Idea of Numbers That Stagger the Mind.

From the Literary Digest.

The English physicist, F. W. Aston, has made some computations that enable us to visualize the enormous number of molecules or atoms contained in small quantities of familiar substances.

If we take an absolutely evacuated incandescent lamp bulb, he says, and make an opening in it so fine that only 1 million molecules of air can enter each second, 10 million years will pass before the bulb would be filled to atmospheric pressure.

Again, suppose that in some way the molecules in an ordinary glass of water could be stained, or otherwise tagged for identification. If this glassful of water is then poured into the ocean, ultimately its molecules will become evenly distributed throughout all bodies of water over the globe. Then each glass of water dipped up anywhere would contain more than 2,000 of the original tagged molecules.

No Rebuilt Jobs.

Johnny Livingston, special flier, has this philosophy for bailing out in a parachute and letting a rampaging plane crash: "They still build planes, but nobody has ever built a human body."

NOW THAT SUMMER'S DONE.

Soft as remembered song
The day above the city wakes,
The distant bell of traffic
A muted clapper shakes.

Black birds in council cloud
The poplar trees along the lawn
Then like a winging shadow
Fly upward and are gone.

Vines whose entangled thatch
Has cooled the baked breath of noon
Grow thin with crisping foliage
That winds shall winnow soon.

Faths of the garden hold
The drift of blossoms, one by one;
Time strikes a grace note gently
Now that the summer's done.

THE BLUE EAGLE FOR WOOLERS.
Almost any day now it will become illegal under the codes of fair competition for a young man to tell a young woman that her eyes are like mountain pools under the moon. To tell her that her hair is a noose of spun gold would be a departure from the statement of strict fact which the NRA requires in all selling arguments. As for the young woman who tells the young man that with a little care and effort two people can live on less than one, it is evident that she is putting forth claims open to statistical refutation. If General Johnson and the codes do not get after her, it is probable that she could be had up under the securities act for misrepresentation.—New York Times.

"I wonder if you could have The Star reprint the Bugler's letter to Pig Iron?" writes McK. "I was out the evening it appeared and when I returned home I found the family had burned the paper."

First we'd better determine whether the family burns the paper regularly in the evening, or just when there's a letter in it from the Bugler to Pig Iron. What would be the use of reprinting letters just for the family to burn up?

Need Poverty Destroy a Girl's Chances for Happiness?

By ROB EDEN

SYNOPSIS.

When Fleur Bennett's father lost his fortune and subsequently suffered a nervous collapse, she did a thing she would not have dreamed possible. The social butterfly went to work. Her father was incapable of looking after his family. Her mother, Lora Bennett, and family, Paul cannot realize that they are penniless. So the task of supporting the family falls to Fleur. She rises to the situation with a courage and fortitude which surprises her friends. Fleur hates being poor, despises work, and she doesn't say so. Her mother and father, she thinks, are too poor to be poor. Fleur, when Lora Bennett hears that Gary Crewe, wealthy and eligible young divorcee, is interested in Fleur, she insists that his invitations be accepted. Gary is a likable chap, generous, good-natured, but Fleur doesn't love him, and she won't marry him for his money even though it would bring financial independence to her family. She has decided that she must have love, and immediately she begins to plan. Advertising copy writer at the Peerless store, where Fleur sells dresses, to please her mother, Fleur finally accepts a dinner engagement with Gary Crewe. Gary is invited to a number of Fleur's wealthy friends, but Fleur has no zest for the party. Something seems missing; everything seems changed.

SYLVIA was the same, and Timmy, and Carrots and the rest of them. It was only she who was different.

The champagne with which Gary was so liberal, and which he managed to import somehow from France, didn't interest her except that she knew it had cost a lot of money. Fully $15 a quart.

Before the party was over, Gary would have spent hundreds of dollars. Was she getting miserly thinking of money the way she did? Figuring the cost of everything? She had never done it before at Sutton Place. Money hadn't interested her then. Now it did. When you didn't have it, she thought, it was all-important. When you did, nothing mattered.

"Isn't that the dress you wore to Carrots' party?" Sylvia asked. She had a fashion of remembering clothes, and mentioning them. Fleur admitted it was, reluctantly.

Carrots' party had taken place last fall, and the reason she hadn't taken the white chiffon and the black net to Mrs. Rafton's was because she thought they wouldn't bring as much money as some of her other dresses. She had been right, considering what had been paid for the silver service.

The dress had been for Carrots' party, and she had gone with Timmy Moreland. Timmy Moreland was to have been her escort the night John Bennett had fainted in the library. She looked at him, and wondered how she could have been attracted to him. And yet, she had for some months. Sylvia apparently was taken up with him tonight, and he with Timmy.

Timmy hadn't called her once in that hectic week that followed the crash, and she hadn't seen him until tonight. Before that April night which had dumped everything topsy-turvy for her, Timmy had been devoted.

He had phoned her several times a day, he wrote her notes which were needless, but which he thought necessary because he said he loved her, he sent her flowers. Every time she saw him he asked her to marry him. He was probably asking Sylvia now.

She thought that Carrots was a bit patronizing, but perhaps it was only her pride that made her think so. "My dear," Carrots confided, "don't think you're the only poverty-stricken member of the gang. Daddy actually cut down my allowance last week, and all I get now is a paltry $50 a week! Can you imagine it? Why I can hardly exist on that."

She was paying her bills as usual, but he told her to try to economize a little on her clothes, too. When I need everything in the world, I don't know what I'm going to do. But $50 a week, when I was always getting a hundred—Carrots mourned on, but Fleur didn't feel the least sorry for her.

There was a time when she, too, had an allowance, and she was a girl. She was as large as Sylvia or Carrots, but plenty. Forty dollars a week to spend on herself, and not a bill to pay out of it. Paul had the same at college and constantly complained that it was too small, but John Bennett was firm. Forty dollars it remained.

It was true Andrea had worked once for two days. To the surprise of all her friends she had found herself a job in the comparison shopping bureau of a department store.

Everybody was so stunned with Andrea's independence that they could only sit and wonder how long it would last. There were bills to pay in the crowd. Fleur had bet herself, five dollars against Timmy's ten, that it would only last a week. Timmy said two days, and Fleur had lost. It had lasted just two days.

Andrea always said she quit because she had to get up too early in the mornings for her convenience. The truth was, although no one knew it, that she had been fired for inefficiency. Andrea still liked to talk about her working days.

"I know how you feel about it, Fleur. It is hard getting up in the mornings, isn't it? Especially after you've been out practically the whole night. And the hours are so long. Eight hours in a day, in a working day, I mean."

"I used to count them off. The first hour was kind of fun, but the others weren't. I know. I don't see how all these girls stand it and yet they do it year in and year out."

place. Modernizing it, when the charm of the house was its quaint old world character.

Two years ago an architect, whom Mrs. Bennett had consulted about some suggested changes, had said it was one of the most charming homes he had ever seen, and that he would leave it as it was. That the changes she wanted would spoil it.

Mrs. Bennett didn't believe him until she had called in two more architects, who told her the same thing. So the house had remained the same.

"Let's dance," Fleur said to Gary. She wanted to get away from the noisy table. She wanted to forget what she had heard about the house. But when she was in Gary's arms and the orchestra was playing a fox trot she had requested, she still didn't have any peace.

She was thinking of the house, and of the Hugheses, whom she had never seen, living in it. Lorraine Hughes, who was 21, and Theodore Hughes, who was ancient—all of 60. She was thinking of the workmen in the garden, in the house, ripping, tearing.

Gary's arms tightened around her. "You're awfully sweet, Fleur, do you know? But you're like brittle china, white like china, too, with your white dress and your whitish hair. I feel all the time you're going to drop and break, and I won't have you any more. I like you, do you know that?"

It didn't matter whether Gary liked her or not, but she smiled nevertheless, a forced, unhappy sort of smile. She couldn't get the house off her mind.

She would tell Paul about the changes, and they would sign over them together, for she knew Paul loved the house as much as she did, but she didn't dare tell her mother. She hoped she wouldn't find out.

"I think I love you, Fleur."

"Silly, you've been divorced from Myrna only three months—"

She didn't want him to make love to her. She didn't want anyone but Tom to make love to her. Again she wished she had gone riding with Tom tonight. She'd tell him tomorrow that she'd been bored to death, and he'd be pleased. She liked to please Tom.

Somebody, when she and Gary returned to the table, said it was three o'clock, and it was time to go to Sylvia's for bacon and eggs. Somebody else seconded the motion, and there was a general rising.

Fleur was astonished. She didn't know it was so late. And she had to get up at seven as usual, and stand on her feet all day at the Peerless just the same. Gary was put out when she insisted on being taken home, but she knew what time Sylvia's bacon and egg parties broke up. She had been on a good many of them before.

The crowd usually ended up in Sylvia's big kitchen where Andrea, because she had a knack for cooking bacon and eggs, produced great platters of them. The maids finally routed them out when they came into the kitchen to prepare for the day's work.

"Like to come out Sunday to the polo field?" Gary asked when he took her to the door. "I'm not playing Sunday so I can be with you."

Fleur refused. She was going out with Tom Sunday, and besides she was through after tonight with the old crowd. Quite through regardless of what her mother said. As she ran up the stairs, she remembered that she had forgotten to thank Gary for his party. Her archbills were wilted, too. Three of them were broken off, and withered.

The small, neatly printed notice next to the cashier's window on the tenth floor was attracting a good deal of notice. Fleur saw it for the first time when she went to get her pay envelope Saturday before going out to lunch.

"Starting today," the memo from Suydam Grant's office read, "the employees of the Peerless department store will take a 10 per cent wage cut. By this method it will be possible to retain all employees. As soon as conditions warrant, normal pay envelopes will be resumed. It is hoped this emergency measure will be of short duration."

Fleur signed the pay roll and received the small envelope which held her week's salary. Sure enough, opening it, she found instead of her usual bills only one ten, one five, a one, and two shiny silver dimes.

A dollar 80 cents less than she expected. She bit her lips in vexation as she took the elevator downstairs. A dollar 80 cents a week made a big difference to her now.

A dollar 80 cents could buy a lot of things. Food for one whole day, but a lot of things she needed badly, repairs on the kitchen sink which Mr. Weiss, their landlord, would not pay for, lunches for a week.

"Beastly, isn't it?" one of the girls in the car exclaimed. "But then I guess we're lucky not to lose our jobs."

The host of things one day had never seemed so important to Fleur until she had lost it. If so important, she had ever told her when she lived at Sutton Place that she would be worrying about one dollar and 80 cents, she would have laughed heartily. She wasn't laughing as she left the elevator. The smallest pucker of a frown rested on her forehead.

Summer had never meant anything before to Fleur but the beach, the sea, the sand. Playing with Paul. Coming in hungry from a long swim, eating, resting, perhaps dancing before another swim.

There was the motorboat, which had been Paul's last summer. The surf board she was getting used to. There were Paul's friends and her friends. There was the sun browning her white body.

There was no worrying about one dollar and 80 cents. . . . With a sigh, she left the window, glancing at a clock as she walked away. Plenty of time yet, and at noon it did her good to walk around, get out in the air.

A low green roadster pulled up to the curb, pale apple green with a radiator of chromium nickel, and seats of dove grey leather. Shining, spanking new. Two girls were in it, one of them Sylvia Grant, the other Fleur didn't know.

"Fleur, wait a minute." Sylvia was climbing out of the car. "Isn't it glorious?" Fleur knew she meant the car, and said it was glorious.

"It's my birthday today, you know, and Yvonne woke me up early this morning, and told me there was a present outside for me. It was this—from daddy! With the funniest little note on the steering wheel you ever saw. I was thrilled to death. It is lovely, isn't it?"

"Grand!" Fleur saw the small chromium initials on the pale green door, "S. G."

"Daddy does, do the sweetest things—you remember last year when he gave me that treasure hunt party, and I found a sail boat at the end? Wasn't it fun?"

Fleur remembered the treasure hunt. It was where she had met Timmy. "Oh, this is Mrs. Hughes, Fleur."

Fleur acknowledged the introduction, and her glance lingered on Mrs. Hughes. Was she THE Mrs. Hughes? Mrs. Theodore Hughes who had their house?

Sylvia anticipated her curiosity. "Mrs. Hughes has your house now."

Immediately, Mrs. Hughes became vastly interesting to Fleur. She took in every detail of the yellow sports suit, of the blond hair that curled down under the brimmed yellow hat, of the yellow straw purse, and the jade green scarf that was wound around the slender throat, as if it were a noose.

"So you are the Bennett girl," Mrs. Hughes was saying. She spoke with a little drawl that Fleur disliked. "I've heard a lot about you. I suppose you're wondering what I'm doing to the house."

Without giving Fleur time to answer, she continued. "I'm making a lot of changes—how do you like it? It did need repairs badly. Besides the repairs, I'm remodeling it—the interior will be entirely changed. I don't like to like it better. I've always liked modernistic architecture."

"We've always loved the house so," Fleur couldn't help saying that any more than she could help the tears that rushed to her eyes at the same time. She felt like a romantic fool when Mrs. Hughes' words came.

"Yes—it is nice, the location and all that. At first I wanted to tear it down and build again on the grounds, but my husband was against that, so I'm only making alterations. He's leaving everything to me—so I have carte blanche with it."

"And what about the contractors, and builders, and architects, I'm so busy I don't know what to do. Just now I've an appointment with a landscape gardener, for I'm going to change the gardens in front and back, too."

"The trees around the house make it dark, and I like something more formal than dogwood and oak. Of course, it's not time to put in a garden, but I want everything ready for next spring. While I'm busy with the house, I might as well think of the garden."

Fleur murmured something to be polite. The garden, too. . . . "You'll want to see the house when it's finished, won't you?"

Fleur knew she wouldn't want to, but she said she would.

"Well, I'll call you when we're in it, and have you to tea. I have to hurry." She turned to Sylvia. "My appointment was for twelve-thirty and it's nearly one."

The girl watched them hurry into a building, and then turned to the car. It was beautiful, quite the most beautiful car she had ever seen. Other people apparently thought so, too, because a crowd was gathering around the automobile. One man was stooping down to examine more closely the foreign trademark on one of the chromium wire wheels.

CHAPTER VIII. Suydam Grant's employees seldom saw him, but when he did come through the store his bills were talked of for days afterwards. What he had done, what he had worn, what he had said, to whom he had spoken.

Fleur was forgetting him in the role of Sylvia Grant's father. She knew him only as THE Suydam Grant. Although she didn't call him "the boss" or the "old man," as others did, still he wasn't the same man she had known.

She has such fine taste, and she would be an asset. "Of course, she'd have to learn like the rest of us. I can't offer her much of a salary, but you can tell her to come in to see me if she wants to. The work will be pleasant, not too hard, and—interesting to her, I think. Good luck."

He was gone, and Fleur was standing looking after him. It was kind of him to think of them, to try to help them.

He was talking to Miss Ladishaw now, smiling a little as he talked. He was always gracious to his workers. Miss Ladishaw was very earnest in her short conversation with him. Earnest and proper and businesslike.

She was awed by Suydam Grant, too, as much as the rest of them, Fleur thought. Queer to think of bustling, efficient Miss Ladishaw awed by anyone. . . .

When he finally left, she noticed the tension relax. For there had been a tension when Grant was in the department.

Even she, who should not have felt it at all, was conscious of it herself. She was glad that Mr. Grant didn't come in every day.

All the way home she was hoping that her mother would take the job Grant had offered. He had said it would be easy, pleasant, even if the money wasn't much.

Certainly it would simplify matters for the Bennett family if Mrs. Bennett worked. She was staying at home too much, never leaving the flat except when it was absolutely necessary. The job would get her out, make her see things as they were, Fleur decided. Aside from that, there was the money angle. They needed the money.

Paul wasn't home when she arrived, so she and her mother had dinner alone. Not a good dinner, but such as Mrs. Bennett usually cooked. A meat loaf, because Fleur had ground up some left-over steak the night before and put it in the ice box. Boiled potatoes, lettuce salad, rolls from the bakery around the corner.

She didn't tell her mother immediately about the job at Grant's. She didn't quite know how to approach the subject. After dinner, when she was doing the dishes, Mrs. Bennett came to the door of the kitchen.

"I'm out of my cream, Fleur. I used the last bit this afternoon."

Fleur looked away. The cream Mrs. Bennett had mentioned was a face cream for which she paid $16 a jar.

"It's the only kind I've ever liked—the best I've used. I wish now I'd bought more of it in Paris when I was there, if I had known what was going to happen. I would."

"I don't see how we can afford more mother—"

"They couldn't. That was all there was to it."

"I suppose not," Mrs. Bennett sighed, and turned to go. "But when you get used to things, it's a blow when you have to do without them. I thought maybe we could sell the ermine coat and could get some cream, and lots of things we need."

The ermine coat again. Last night Paul had approached her about selling it, and she had refused.

"I think we're going to need the coat—later, mother. And when it's gone there isn't going to be anything else to sell."

The ermine coat was tempting, she had to admit, but they didn't need to sell it at present. They could get along somehow without selling it. Later—she hated to think about the future. It was so dark, so forbidding. The ermine coat was to be kept for this future.

"I suppose so." Another sigh, heavier than the last.

"By the way, mother—" It was a good time to mention Mr. Grant's offer, and Fleur leaped at the opportunity. "Mr. Grant wondered if you wouldn't like to go into the interior decoration department at the store. He said you have such excellent taste, and although the job wouldn't pay you much at first, it would be easy and pleasant."

As soon as she had spoken she wished she hadn't. For Mrs. Bennett's lips were drooping, and the same tired, despairing look that Fleur hated so much to see came back into her blue eyes.

"I'd rather sell the ermine coat, Fleur—" If she could only make her mother see that it was best. That after the first plunge, she would be going out, seeing people again. That it hurt at first to realize you were no longer a Bennett of Sutton Place, but after a while it didn't matter so much. . . .

"If I have to, I will, Fleur—" "You don't have to, mother. We're managing all right the way we are, but I thought a job would take your mind off—things. It has nothing will ever take my mind off—things. And if we need money we'd better sell the coat. We don't need it that badly—yet. I'll take some more clothes down to Mrs. Rafton's tomorrow to get money to meet the rent. What about that black suit with the fur that you have? You don't need it, do you?"

Loved ones need you!

—you dare not fail them

NO ONE has to tell you that mental distress and nervous strain, overwork, colds, the "flu," sickness or a deficient diet weaken the body. You can feel it.

Now medical science attributes that tired, worn-out, let-down feeling to deficient hemoglobin (skin and tissue purifier) in the blood—necessary for carrying the vital oxygen from the lungs to all parts of the body—even to the skin—and in throwing off body poisons.

Even a sufficient and well balanced diet cannot properly nourish the body, unless the blood contains sufficient hemoglobin.

Today tens of thousands take a course of S.S.S. Tonic once or twice a year to regain lost strength, restore the appetite and to clear up the skin.

Take S.S.S. just before meals. No need to change your diet. S.S.S. will not interfere with any other medicine you may be taking. You will be happy with the beneficial results obtained. Start taking it today. At all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The larger size is more economical.

MORE WORK ON CLOTHES

NEW LINES REQUIRE WORKMANSHIP AND MANY WORKERS.

Homespun Are as Elegant as Velvets in Their Way, Bright in Color and Simple in Line.

Women show intense interest in the fall collections which are being shown. French houses have been the inspiration for some really stunning clothes. After all the dressmaking business is also struggling toward recovery. The couture especially toward the recovery of a lost elegance and the re-establishment of something that stands for beauty and real value in dress.

This is the basic idea of the new fabrics. The idea behind the fitted lines is the restoration of good workmanship. Anyone who has any knowledge of dressmaking or tailoring will understand the statement that this season's models are not of the kind that anyone can copy. And that is exactly why they were created, and why they will, in all likelihood, really be instrumental in converting us to more formal and meticulously made clothes.

No matter which of the several silhouettes you choose for your dresses, remember that it must fit. There can be nothing haphazard about it. The princess line is conspicuous among the leading silhouettes, and must be treated with respect. One must look to one's figure, and to the fit of one's clothes. The whole effect is lost otherwise, no matter how lovely the fabrics and colors used.

Good workmanship and restraint are advised. It is easy to overdo elegance, which will make the mode inelegant. It's the clothes for the occasion fashion desires to stress also. Velvets and ostrich feathers and other lovely things are only lovely in their place.

Because you hear homespun and all manner of hand knit things are in fashion, do not think of them as being a contradiction of the grand manner. They are in their way quite as elegant as anything could be, and it is everybody's guess that women who take elegance as a matter of course, will be going in for these good looking materials for everyday.

Color is spread over a varied range, but with emphasis on dark shades both for day and evening. In this respect, old-fashioned or Edwardian colors are recalled. Gray is a strong daytime choice, particularly in medium-dark range.

FUR IN ODD CUTS.

Circles and Lattice of Beaver One of the Most Novel.

(By the Associated Press.)

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Furs are cut in new ways to trim this year's winter coats. One designer trims the body of a green wool coat collared in beaver with dollar-sized circles of beaver placed at various intervals. Another trims the three-quarter length coat of a tea green wool ensemble with a beaver lattice work and a third cuts silver fox into small portions to edge the train of a mauve velvet evening wrap.

NOW FOR CHINESE LINES.

Schiaparelli Designed the "Pagoda Dress" in Chinese Red.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—A "pagoda dress," built on the lines of the Chinese tower, is one of the most striking models of the 1934 collections. The model, designed by Schiaparelli of silvery gray satin, follows a very slender silhouette until the hemline which flares in a manner suggestive of a pagoda roof. It is worn with a hip length cape of bright Chinese red taffeta quilted in a lattice design.

SPANGLES AND TINSEL ON WOOL.

Gold and Silver Threads Are Interwoven on Dark Hues.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—Spangles shimmer in the weave of a number of new winter wool frocks shown in recent fashion shows. Round black paillettes are woven into numerous black or dark-hued wools, while little gold spangles gleam from others. Gold and silver threads are woven into others which are called tame wools.

Broiled Hamburger, Serving Four.
1 pound chopped beef, round.
1/2 pound chopped pork.
1/2 cup crumbs.
1/2 cup salt.
1/2 cup pepper.
1/2 cup onion.
1/2 cup celery salt.
1/2 cup finely chopped onion.
1/2 cup finely chopped parsley.
1 egg or 2 yolks.
Mix ingredients and press into pie pan. Broil ten minutes, six inches below glowing flame. Place another pie pan on top the meat and turn out, uncooked side up, and broil 4 minutes. Carefully turn onto a platter.

Draw String Neck in Knitted Fabric.

The Oxford gray skirt is the keynote of many a campus dress, the selection of the blouse or jacket is the individual touch. Here it is shown in black with a padded shoulder and a white blouse. Equally smart in the fall seas.

A COAT THAT IS A COAT FOR ALL WEATHER.

Mainbocher sponsored and all the world copied this honest coat of ample proportions, heavy weight and great utility as well as chic. It is seen in such materials as hop sack and chinchilla, which the grownups are flitting from the children this season. Beneath it is worn a black jersey dress with dull crepe top.

Smoothing Out the In-Laws Is a Part of Married Life

To Take Total Strangers on the Basis of Family Intimacy Is a Strain That Needs Courtesy and Consideration From Both Sides.

By Emily Post.
ONE is rather apt to overlook the fact that when John Jones marries Mary Smith, a number of Smiths and Joneses are suddenly forced into the closeness of family relationships.

Even on the rare occasion when a bride or bridegroom has no family, he or she becomes son or daughter, sister or brother, to those who more often than not have hitherto been total strangers. A happy few of these new in-laws are able to make complete adjustments; others again (the majority, I believe), would fit smoothly into the machinery of accord if only a single rasper sprocket might be filed smooth.

An illustration of a rasper sprocket is shown in this point of view of one mother-in-law who says: "I sometimes visit my son and daughter-in-law and have never yet come home without bringing hurt feelings, which I want to overcome if they are not justified. During my week's visit my daughter-in-law goes out to parties in the afternoon and sometimes for a drive in a car, which doesn't seem to be overworked, but she never suggests that I be included, nor does she offer any apologies for leaving me—she just goes. Otherwise she is a very sweet person and I would like to find reasons for her acting discourteously if I can, because after every visit I am less fond of her."

Remember Your Own Youth.

I would like to say to her that, if you are on formal terms with your daughter-in-law and very rarely stay with her and your son, she would properly show you the consideration exacted by a visitor whom she does not know very well. On the other hand if you want her to love you and to really like having you stay with them, then don't allow yourself the dangerous luxury of hurt feelings, and don't exchange the reality of spontaneous impulse for the enforced observance of a duty. This perhaps sounds unfair to you, but let me ask you a question: Can you remember your own behavior when you were young—above all, your attitude toward your mother-in-law—or even toward your own mother? Can you accurately remember how much you urged her to go out with you among your own friends—sharing your good times? Search back in your own memory, please. You may have loved your mother better than anything on earth, but did your friends want to have her with them, too, on every occasion? If you can truthfully say "yes" to this, then either your memory has become imaginary or your mother's personality was that of one in a million. And at this moment we are speaking of mothers—not of mothers-in-law.

So, returning to yourself as a mother-in-law, let me ask another question: Would you rather have your daughter-in-law do what she wants to do, to have her lead her own life, to let her feel herself utterly unhampered, or would you prefer to have her every impulse checked by the thought, "Mother will be hurt," "Mother will feel lonely," "No, I can't do this or go there because mother is my guest?" To me there seems no possible question about the answer.

Don't Criticize or Hamper Others. Of course there are considerations that she should show if she in turn is to be the perfect daughter-in-law; time here and there in which her attention is wholly given you. You say that apart from going out and leaving you, she is a very sweet person. Doesn't that mean that she is considerate and responsive when you see her? If I were to draw a picture of a perfect in-law relationship, I would say first of all that it must be unhampered and uninterfering and uncriticizing. In the reverse picture where the daughter-in-law goes to stay—or to live—with her parents-in-law, she must do her best to conform to their habits. But she should at the same time be free to make her own engagements and to do what she likes—so long as she does not disrupt the ways of the house.

It is true that the how we do or say something is always more important than the what. If such a Activities of Women.

Miss Mary C. Duffy, Newark, N. J., was recently re-elected supreme regent of the Catholic Daughters of America, largest Catholic women's organization in the world.

Japanese women of Oshima Island can carry unusually heavy weight on their heads. The training comes because of the scarcity of water; women often have to travel five miles to the nearest well for water.

Mrs. Hugh Johnson, wife of the NRA administrator, is the third member of her family to do her bit to aid President Roosevelt's re-employment cause. She receives no compensation. Her son, Kallbourne, is also enrolled.

A total of 6,989 Gold Star American mothers visited their sons' graves in France during the last four years. The last group of 166 recently returned home after a tour of the war cemeteries.

The Hindu women of India may now powder her face, wear her hair in curls or have a permanent wave, look frequently in a mirror and replace a broad saffron streak on the forehead by a small circular mark.

The plight of the depression's destitute in the United States has aroused more women to volunteer for Red Cross work than the exigency of the World War. More than 600,000 are now engaged in garment making alone. Feminine workers also have taken a large part in relief activities of all kinds.

Among the new doctors licensed to practice in the District of Columbia is Miss Katherine Elizabeth Parker. Although she has studied for more than six years with a physician's license in view, she has now signed up with the George Washington Medical school to do some intensive research work in pathology.

Don't Be Sentimental, Either.
If we of yesterday (or the day before that) would have the affection of those of today given to us freely, we must ourselves be free in the sense of being impersonally independent. We all know that nothing is harder to build than this impersonality of mind, and one moment's relaxed indulgence in self-pity will bring it all crashing down. The first step in the achievement of impersonality is in keeping our thoughts away from every trend that is sentimental by thinking of something else, never mind what else.

The one lesson that each and every one of us who belong alone—by that I mean all those who are widowed or single, and whose children or sisters and brothers have married—is that we may never give clinging impulses a chance to develop. These few paragraphs are not intended as a dissertation on nobility of character; they are nothing but a few common-place rules for self-preservation. We hear so much about dieting and taking daily dozens and doing all sorts of other irksome things to preserve physical beauty, and relatively little about the unrelenting exercise of plain common-sense in achieving mental beauty by adjusting the capital "I" to its relative position in the world at large.
